UPSIDE DOWN FLAG ON STATUE'S CROWN

Antiwar Veterans Bow to Federal Court Order

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixteen antiwar veterans bowed to federal court order today and opened the doors of the Statue of Liberty after holding the national monument since Sunday night.

The veterans walked out of the pedestal after their lawyers brought word to Liberty Island that Judge Lawrence W. Pierce had barred further occupation of the statue, which the group siezed to dramatize their opposition to continued fighting in Vietnam.

The veterans, members of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW), came to the island on the last sightseeing boat Sunday, barricaded themselves inside and then Monday refused a government compromise that would have opened the statue but allowed them to camp on Liberty Island where it stands.

The veterans said they took the action to dramatize their stand against the continuing war in Indochina.

"She's a good old girl," Ray Grodecki, one of the veterans on the island, said of the statue. "We recognized what she should represent and that's why we've chosen this site."

The Statue of Liberty protest was one of three conducted Monday in connection with the VVAW. About 60 veterans in Philadelphia barricaded themselves in the Betsy Ross House, the building where the first American flag was made, which is also a national monument. Police broke in and arrested about 20 persons.

Four civilians and 18 Army drug patients barricaded themselves in the second floor ward of a hospital at Travis Air Force Base in California. They voluntarily abandoned their barricades later.

U.S. Jets Continue Sustained Bombings

SAIGON (UPI)—Waves of U.S. jets crossed into North Vietnam again today in the third day of the most sustained bombing campaign against the north since former President Lyndon B. Johnson halted strikes above the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) in 1968. North Vietnam said the massive raids would delay the release of American war prisoners.

As the air war escalated, the allied ground effort in neighboring Laos was deteriorating.

North Vietnamese troops and Laotian guerrillas captured the Bolovens Plateau town of Paksong in southern Laos today with the effect of widening the Ho Chi Minh Trail over which the Communists ship war materiel into South Vietnam.

The principal targets of the strikes into North Vietnam were airfields, missile pads and gun platforms harboring the Soviet-built MIG jets, surface-to-air missiles and antiaircraft artillery.

Radio Hanoi said the Americans bombed at least one school and two hospitals in the strikes that extended to within 35 miles of Hanoi.

American military sources denied the Hanoi report and said the targets of the American planes were military.

The Hanoi military newspaper Quan Doi Nhan Dan said today, "So long as Nixon does not stop his aggressive war, the captured U.S. pilots cannot return home."

The report of the newspaper, carried in a Hanoi Radio broadcast and heard in Tokyo specifically mentioned Kenneth Richard Johnson, who Nhan Dan said was captured Dec. 18 after he bailed out of his burning plane over North Vietnam.

"The more reckless Nixon becomes . . . the weaker becomes the position of Kenneth Richard Johnson." The report did not further identify the American airman.

The jets carried out the first of the third day's strikes in the early morning hours today and were directed at "military targets" inside North Vietnam, military spokesmen said.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said in Washington Monday that Hanoi had violated the understanding by shelling South Vietnamese cities including Saigon on Dec. 19, construction of an infiltration road throug the DMZ, failure to negotiate meaningfully in Paris as promised and firing on unarmed U.S. reconnaissance planes.

Laird defends latest bombing runs as Democrats criticize policy. Story on Page 24.

Military sources said the attacks on North Vietnam had the personal approval of Nixon.

Military spokesmen refused to give details of the strikes, citing security. They declined to comment on reports from Hanoi that five F4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers were shot down on the first day of the current campaign on Sunday.

Hanoi Radio said today that a hospital had been bombed by U.S. planes and two patients killed and many others injured. The broadcast said the hospital was at Thanh Hoa, 80 miles south of Hanoi. The radio said it was the second time a hospital had been hit in the current U.S. bombing campaign, the first having been Sunday at Hoa Binh, 35 miles southwest of the North Vietnamese capital.

On South Vietnamese battlefronts, Viet Cong units attacking South Vietnamese militiamen shot down an American helicopter and crippled seven others with heavy groundfire 23 miles northwest of Saigon on Monday.

Ten Americans were wounded in the attack near the district headquarters of Duc Hue.

Military sources said the helicopter shot down was coming in for a landing to pick up wounded South Vietnamese troops when a Viet Cong rocket grenade hit it and it burst into flames. The others were hit by machine-gun fire later.

Meanwhile, in Paris, the United States and North Vietnam cancelled the next session of the Vietnam peace talks in simultaneous actions today.

The meeting had been scheduled for Thursday and would have been the first since Dec. 8. The United States gave the same reasons Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird gave Monday to justify the current heavy air attacks on North Vietnam. The North Vietnamese said their cancellation was in protest against the air attacks.

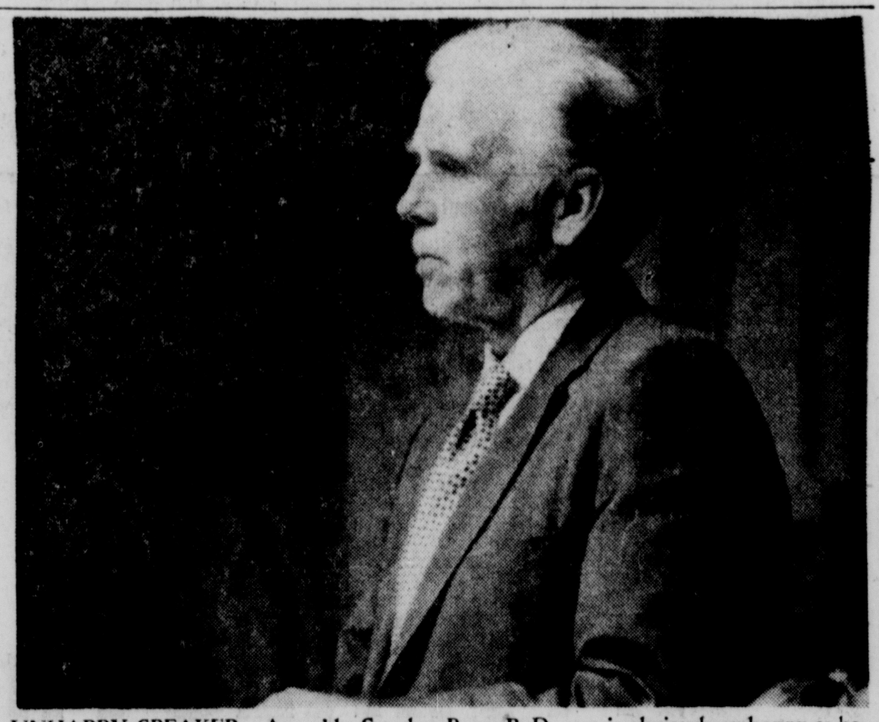

The United States and its South Vietnamese allies suggested no date for resumption of the talks but said this "does not imply any intention on the part of our side to discontinue the Paris talks." It suggested that the liaison officers of the four delegations could set a new date.

North Vietnam and the Viet Cong called for resumption of the talks on Jan. 6.

A North Vietnamese spokesman, Nguyen Thanh Le, told a news conference that liaison officers of the two sides met at the North Vietnamese delegation headquarters at 9 a.m. today and exchanged the cancellation notes.

A Viet Cong spokesman, Ly Van Sau, accused President Nixon of "gradually sabotaging the conference" and said the reasons given by the U.S. delegation for cancelling Thursday's session were "a pretext to justify the Nixon plan for expanding the war."

"This has created a very grave situation," he added.

Stop Playing Games...Bell

By LYNN MULVANEY

ALBANY

"Gov. Rockefeller should stop playing games," an impatient Assemblyman H. Clark Bell told the Freeman today, as he once again called for "more facts" pertaining to the state's fiscal crisis.

Charging that all of the governor's proposals call for increasing taxes, Bell asks, "Where are the budget cuts?"

A member of the Legislature's Ways and Means Committee, he said that as of last night the committee has not yet received the governor's proposals for $275 million in cuts in state operations, capital construction, state purposes budget and the local assistance budget. All we have received, Bell explained is Rockefeller's proposed $427 million in taxes and the $400 million rollover of aid to education.

Describing the discontent of lawmakers over the governor's proposals, Bell said, "The Legislature does not intend to engage in a game of blind man's bluff with the taxpayers."

The Woodstock Assemblyman also suggested that there is a growing suspicion that the people on "the governor's staff don't know what they are doing. All the top line advisors of the past are gone now, "he explained, "and the new whizkid, Harvard-Yale types on the staff now, although academically well grounded, apparently are not too good at running an $8 billion corporation."

Gov. Rockefeller was reportedly under heavy pressure today to drop his proposed income-tax surcharge as the special legislative session entered into its second day, but sources said he would stand by the proposal.

The five-per-cent surcharge—or tax on the state income tax—is the key element in the governor's tax package, with an estimated yield of $139 million.

Pressure had come from members of both parties to drop the surcharge, according to the sources, who said the governor had decided against such a move.

Rockefeller had proposed a total of $427 million in new taxes to close his projected $1.5 billion deficit over the next 15 months.

Related legislature stories and photo on page 7.

Senate Minority Leader Joseph Zaretzki said Democrats were opposed to the surcharge and Rockefeller's plan to eliminate the $12.50 tax credit for single persons and $25 credit for families.

He indicated opposition was minimal, however, to Rockefeller's plans to increase the so-called nuisance taxes on gasoline, cigarettes, liquor, wine and beer.

Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges said some Republicans felt Rockefeller is relying too heavily on an anticipated $400-million increase in federal aid through revenue sharing.

Brydges said some rank-and-file Republicans want a contingency plan in case the federal aid fails to materialize. He said that there had also been suggestions to increase the income and capital-gains taxes but did not elaborate.

Assembly Speaker Perry B. Duryea said he was "dubious" about the $400-million increase in federal aid.

Legislators met only briefly in formal session Monday and then went into private conferences.

Seeking Dem Presidential Bid

Lindsay Makes It Official

MIAMI (UPI)—Mayor John V. Lindsay declared his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination today with a sweeping attack on the Nixon administration and a vow to "speak for the America that Washington has ignored."

The tall, handsome New York mayor said in a prepared statement at a Miami news conference that he was seeking the presidency because he felt it was time for a chief executive who had firsthand knowledge of the problems of America.

"It is time for a president who has seen and felt firsthand the anguish of imposed scarcity—who has been forced to choose between teachers in our schools and doctors in our hospitals, between cleaning our rivers and caring for the sick—because the funds we need are drained away into mindless wars and into the pockets of the few," he said.

Lindsay, 50, was elected to Congress and mayor of New York as a Republican. In 1968, he delivered a seconding speech for the nomination of Spiro T. Agnew as vice president. Four months ago he quit the Republican party, saying it had "stifled dissent and driven progressives from its ranks."

Lindsay said the other Democratic candidates had Washington backgrounds, as had every president with a political background in the past 40 years. "In 1972, someone must speak for the America that Washington has ignored," he said.

The mayor attacked the Nixon administration for its policies on Vietnam, the economy, law and order, the Supreme Court and the divisions within the country.

"We know it is not a New Prosperity when two million Americans are thrown out of work in three years," he said. "It is not a Generation of Peace when our bombs rain death on the men, women and children of three Asian nations, and at this moment again escalate the endless, wretched war in Vietnam into the North."

Lindsay criticized President Nixon for vetoing the Day Care Center program, for failing to control the sale of handguns and for nominating to the Supreme Court men whom the mayor called "insensitive to liberty."

"And we know, too, that when an administration listens only to those with entrenched wealth and power, it is not healing our divisions—it is widening and deepening them," he said. "For the truth about Washington is that it is a capital closed to the ordinary citizen but open to bankrupt corporate giants, foreign dictators and to those wealthy enough to buy privileged protection with campaign cash."

Lindsay confirmed speculation that he would skip the nation's first primary in New Hampshire, where Sen. Edmund S. Muskie is considered to have a big lead.

He said he was beginning his race with the March 14 Florida primary "because Florida, with its economic and cultural diversity, is a testing ground for the beliefs and principles I will run on."

Paltz Village, Town Boards to Discuss Traffic

By WADE BURKHART

NEW PALTZ

The New Paltz Village Board agreed to meet as a whole with the New Paltz Town Board sometime in January, but the trustees made it clear they were not happy with the arragnements at their Monday night meeting.

The agreed upon meeting will be for the purpose of discussing New Paltz' traffic problems, which most New Paltz residents agree are many and acute.

The village board is not against town-village meetings, and fesolved that such meetings be set up at their October meeting. However, the form they have favored is a meeting of committees, two members of each board and the heads of the respective planning boards making them up.

The village has twice offered to hold meetings between committees. The town has twice refused, maintaining the proper way to do it was with the boards as a whole meeting.

Trustee John Sherwig, head of the village's subcommittee on traffic, said the village had requested the town's committee meet with them Dec. 13. He reported the village committee showed up, but the town's didn't sending word through Mayor Henry W. DuBois they could not because of a previous engagement, and would not because they preferred a full joint meeting. Sherwig said the village committee suffered "varying shades of disappointment."

Saying the village was faced with a choice of going ahead with the problem solving without the town, or doing it on the town's terms, Sherwig moved, and received Trustee George Ackert's second, that the village board meet in January as a whole with the town board.

Sherwig said the village should exhibit "forebearance and understanding". Trustee O. Lincoln Igou said he was all for forebearance and understanding, but he "resented being pushed", and voted against the measure. Even Sherwig voted for his own motion "reluctantly".

The whole business shows the village to be "vastly more concerned" about the problem than the town, according to Sherwig. The village's conditions for meeting will be that the planning board send representatives, the county planning board be represented, and specific attention be paid to the Fulton Street extension and a by-pass around the southern part of the village.

Village Attorney Dominick Porto delivered a full report on the legal manuevering involved in the village's attempts to condemn the former Ungerland property for a park. Carrol's a hamburger store chain has bought the property for a stand, and the village board, and many New Paltz residents, are against the idea.

Porto, who characterized the events in the affair to date as "procedural poppycok", said things had been held up by Mrs. Ungerland deeding the property to her son, and her son deeding it to Carrols, all within the space of a month. Porto had been forced to reinstitute the village's suit against Carrol's instead of Mrs. Ungerland, and was having difficulty having the papers served, as the serving must be done personally, not by mail.

Porto said he had located a process server in North Syracuse named "Rock" who was handling the serving. Unfortunately, Porto reported, all the eligible company officers were in San Juan, P.R., for a company conference, and the diligent Rock had so far been foiled. Sherwig said, "Let us hope this is not the Rock upon which our hopes are dashed."

Porto expressed his confidence in Rock, and said while he was not too satisfied with the way things had been going so far, his optimism remained "undiminished" concerning the resolution of the case. The papers to be served will have a return date of Jan. 7 in Supreme Court in Kingston if served in time, or, more probably, Jan. 14 in Albany, Porto said.

At Sherwig's suggestion, the Mayor will be directed to write letters to all village employes expressing thanks for a job well done.

Acting Mayor John Logan, who chaired the meeting in place of the absent DuBois, reported another light will be installed on Huguenot Street, and the sewer plant, while continuing to have its mechanical troubles, was putting out "a good grade of effluent."

Rhinebeck Building Report ...Still Awaiting Action

By TIM SCHUSTER

RHINEBECK

A Board of Education committee on future building needs report for the Rhinebeck district, compiled in Feb., 1971, is still awaiting further action, it was noted at Monday night's board meeting.

When asked whether any progress had been made on plans for district building needs, President Hans Boehm said that as far as he was aware nothing further had materialized in the past ten months.

The committee, comprised of James Kelly and former board member Dr. James McClenahan, noted in part in that report" . . . that we must now proceed to start the ball rolling on a planned course of postive action."

The conclusion of that report stated that the committee was in total agreement "that we must proceed immediately to plan for additional classrooms and or a new school."

District Principal Ralph Steeves also commented Monday evening, "I am worried about school building needs," stating that there are presently 627 students in the high school building which has a capacity of 600.

He pointed out several areas of large construction in the district, notably the 140 apartment units in the Village Green development to soon be ready for occupancy; a 320-bed Ferncliff Nursing Home with attendant employment attraction; and the Baptist Home of Brooklyn plans for building in Rhinebeck plus several associated private dwellings.

Steeves added that it won't take many more students to cause severe problems, saying, "We are going to run into problems, and it's not very far away."

The board heard from high school principal Erwin Kane suggesting that a quota system be set up for tickets to basketball games. He said that the capacity for the small gymnasium was only about 550 and problems with overcrowding were being experienced, espeically since Rhinebeck had a winning team this season.

He suggested selling student tickets beforehand, and selling only adult tickets on a first come first served basis on the night of the game.

Both Steeves and board member Albert Vinck agreed that high school students should get priority over adults.

Kane also noted that National Honor Society students were volunteering tutorial services after school to those in need as a part of expanded service.

He asked that the board grant two dates for open houses, March 10 and April 20, including appointments with specific teachers and general "rap sessions."

And Kane said that he had held several meetings with members of the high chool English program since the evaluation results had been made known, and questionnaires will be circulated among juniors for some type of elective English program.

A letter from Red Hook District Principal Russell Keefe concerning back taxes on the Twigg property said there was no legal way Red Hook could give them to Rhinebeck in the mixup.

ECONOMY TALK — Paul A. Samuelson, Nobel Prize economist from Massachusetts Institute of Technology said the American public would balk at Nixon Administration wage and price guidelines within 15 months and Nixon would have a hard time keeping his promise to control inflation. Speaking at the Allied Special Science Association convention, Samuelson also said the move to devalue the dollar in relation to other currencies was a wise economic move that was long overdue. Trade Deficit Looms for United States

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New balance of trade figures show the United States is virtually assured of its first trade deficit in almost a century.

Even though the $227.2 million deficit for November was a sharp improvement over the $821.4 million record figure for October, its not enough to offset an 11-month trend of more imports than exports.

Last month's statistics released by the Commerce Department Monday put the U.S. trade deficit at $1.7 billion for the first 11 months of 1971. That makes it nearly impossible for December's figures to prevent the first annual deficit since 1893.

The department said the November figure was influenced by dock strikes on the East and West coasts, but that it "does not have adequate information to enable it to specifically measure the influence of the strikes on the statistics."

The bureau said exports totaled $3.16 billion in November while imports totaled $3.39 billion.

Meanwhile, in domestic economic developments Monday:

—Chairman Preston Martin of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board predicted that mortgage money will be in plentiful supply, and perhaps a little cheaper, during 1972.

Martin said he expects conventional mortgage interest rates to stabilize at present levels, or even decline a bit.

He said mortgage commitments currently are being made at a national average of about 7.37 per cent, compared with an average of 7.79 per cent in November and the high of 8.52 per cent in August 1970.

—The Internal Revenue Service said retailers must prominently display their base prices by Sunday.

The IRS said it will not consider the base prices displayed prominently if a shopper can obtain access to them only by requesting base price information from the retailer or an employe.

The base price for retailers is the pric charged during the 90-day wage-price freeze, usually that price that prevailed in the 30 days ending Aug. 14.

—The Price Commission denied a 1.9 per cent price increase sought by Swift & Co. for fertilizer products on grounds that it exceeded the commission's profit margin requirements.

It was only the ninth time the commission has denied a price hike request. The commission also approved 52 more increases, bringing the total approved to 249 out of 1,917 applications.

IRS to Begin Close Check of Retail Stores

WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal Revenue Service agents will begin checking retail stores closely next week for violations of rules requiring freeze-period price ceilings to be posted prominently.

"We will vigorously enforce this regulation," an IRS spokesman said. "These directions have gone out to the field."

Enforcement will be concentrated in big chain stores, those with annual sales of $100,000 or more and subject to a government regulation requiring prior approval of price increases, the spoksman said.

But he emphasized that consumers searching for the highest possible price a store can charge on a given item can obtain that information only by asking the store's management.

What must be posted under government requirements are freeze-period prices, the legally permissable ceilings that existed on goods during the 90-day wage-price freeze from Aug. 15 to Nov. 1.

In many cases, retailers have asked and received approval from the Price Commission to boost their prices beyond this limit. As a result, the freeze-period price is intended only as a rough guide for consumers.

There's one general rule, however, that government regulators informally pass on to consumers: If the price increase on a given item exceeds 2.5 per cent, ask the retailer for the new ceiling price.

Although 2.5 per cent is a general target, the government has approved many price increases higher than that. The rule is that a retailer may not boost his percentage markup, and price increases must be justified by cost increases.

Consumers, however, will not get a look at all the ceiling prices that were permissible during the freeze.

A retailer with annual sales of more than $100,000 a year must post the freeze-period ceiling prices on, at most, 40 items in each department of his store. The items covered are the ones he sold most during the last fiscal year. Or he may post prices only on items that accounted for at least half of total dollar sales in each department.

One exception: Large retailers must post freeze-period prices on all of their food products.

For retailers with annual sales less than $100,000, the same posting rules apply, with a few exceptions. Not all food ceiling prices must be posted, only the ceiling prices on high-volume goods.

The IRS spokesman said little trouble is foreseen in gaining compliance with the posting requirements, long sought by consumer groups. "We're getting a good response," he said.

Senate Proposes Early Action on Appropriation Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders, anxious to limit election year money fights, are proposing early action on appropriations to finance the government next year.

"Everybody has a common interest in getting out early next year," said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott.

Despite that interest held by both Scott and Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, it is a virtual certainty that Congress will have to recess for the Democratic National Convention and return to work in mid-summer.

The Democratic convention begins in Miami Beach July 9, the Republicans convene in San Diego Aug. 21.

Congressional business between the nominating sessions would certainly be heavily flavoerd by presidential politics, particularly with the Democratic nominee likely to come from the Senate.

And there is no guarantee Congress would be able to finish work in time to adjourn for the year prior to the Republican convention.

The situation is similar to that of 1960, when then-Sens. John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson returned to the floor of the Senate as that party's nominees for President and vice president.

As vice president, Richard Nixon was then the presiding officer of the Senate.

Hoping to speed things up, Scott has prepared a resolution to require that the authorization bills which must be passed in advance of appropriations be sent to the floor of the Senate by next June 1.

That could clear the way for early action on the appropriations bills Congress must pass each year before adjourning. They cover spending for the budget year beginning each July 1, but few of them are in fact approved by that time. Instead, Congress has routinely approved resolutions to continue spending authority while it decides what to do about appropriations.

That buys time, but it won't be much help next year if Congress hopes to adjourn during the summer.

Bipartisan Crime Bill Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — With strong bipartisan backing, a proposal is being readied for Senate action that would pay federal cash to victims of violent crime.

The "Victims of Crime Act of 1972" would establish a three-member board to compensate innocent victims of violent crimes, or their survivors, with up to $50,000 for medical bills, loss of earning power and funeral expenses. Compensation would depend on financial need.

The bill would apply primarily to crimes committed in the District of Columbia, in national parks and forests, Indian reservations and on airplanes and ships.

But beyond this, and more far-reaching, is a provision under which the federal government would pay 75 per cent of the cost of compensation programs established by the states in accord with federal standards.

Sponsors hope this would spur all states to have such programs within five or six years. Seven states already have.

The bill would also:

—Subsidize life and disability insurance for policemen, firemen and prison guards, and provide a $50,000 federal death benefit for persons in those fields killed in line of duty.

— Establish antitrust-type court remedies for business victims of organized crime, permitting the federal government to intervene on behalf of victims in civil suits.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., who has steered all of the major anticrime bills through the Senate in recent years, introduced the legislation shortly before Congress adjourned.

He said it consolidated the essential features of several measures on which his Senate Judiciary subcommittee on criminal laws and procedures has held hearings.

Joining McClellan in sponsoring the bill are the Senate leaders of both parties, Democrat Mike Mansfield of Montana and Republican Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania; Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., and the committee's ranking minority member, Sen. Roman L. Hruska of Nebraska.

So far, the administration has hesitated in supporting compensation for violent crime victims, saying it is still studying the idea. But some sponsors say they believe the administration eventually will back the bill.

Scientists Working to Halt Flu

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an eye on the calendar as well as the microscope, scientists are working to blunt the next thrust of a worldwide influenza epidemic.

Major epidemics of the disease sweep the world about every decade, making the late 1970s the next danger period. And the danger is real. The "Asian Flu" epidemic of 1957-1958 and the "Hong Kong Flu" seige of 1968 brought widespread sickness and death in some countries.

To head off the next wave there are new diplomatic initiatives as well as advances in the laboratory.

The government's National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases is working against the clock "with the hopes that we can get some better way of handling this—a better vaccine, or else some other method of handling the disease, maybe even better (drug) treatment," says its director, Dr. Dorland J. Davis.

Davis recommends present-day vaccines for such groups as the elderly and the chronically ill, but acknowledges that they haven't been effective for the population at large.

In the influenza virus, scientists face a medical quick-change artist that is unlike its viral relatives such as smallpox, measles and poliomyelitis for which successful long-term vaccines have been developed.

New strains, mutations of known flu virus, keep popping up to slip past the immunity the body has built up against their ancestors.

When a new virus arrives, says Davis, it takes several months under current methods to isolate it and make vaccines. "So much time is taken up that the epidemic is over," he adds.

Scientists, who feel this winter flu season will be a "quiet" one, are now following two avenues toward a more effective, more quickly generated vaccine.

Flu virus microbes, Davis says, have an "overcoat" of protein antigens, substances which stimulate the formation of antibodies, disease fighters within the body.

"It's our hope that by studying these antigens we might identify ones that are significant and then recombine those in such a way that we will have a vaccine which can be more useful," says Davis.

Another approach is the "hybrid virus." When a new mutant virus strain shows up, says Davis, it can be combined with a known, quick-growing virus to shorten dramatically the time needed to produce vaccine.

Sources in the scientific community say they are hoping to get at the suspected source of the periodic epidemics—southern China.

They say privately that recent trips by American scientists to southern China plus President Nixon's planned trip to the mainland may lead to opportunities for exploration of a generally held theory on the origin of the diseases.

After midnight, December 31st, your 19 year old will be on his own.

Until recently, coverage for unmarried dependents of most Blue Cross and Blue Shield subscribers ended on their 19th birthdays. Now we've extended that coverage to the end of the year, no matter when in 1971 he turned 19.

So, if your child was born in 1952 and became 19 anytime during 1971, he's covered until midnight, December 31st. But you must act now if you want to continue his protection into 1972.

Transfer your 19-year old to an individual contract of his own. To leave him unprotected is risky. While most young people are generally in good health, accidents or illness can strike—often unexpectedly and at considerable cost.

So don't delay. You won't have to pay until the beginning of next year when his individual contract goes into effect.

If you belong to a group you can notify the person who handles Blue Cross and Blue Shield where you work. If you're an individual subscriber and pay direct, send back the 19-year old transfer card we mailed you. Or, if you haven't received a transfer card, fill out this coupon. Act now, after December 31st it will be too late.

Greater New York's BLUE SHIELD United Medical Service, Inc.

I want to continue to cover my 19-year-old with Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Please transfer him to his own individual contract beginning January 1, 1972. I understand that there is no cost to me until the beginning of 1972.

Banks Will Increase Advertising for 1972

NEW YORK — The nation's mutual savings banks plan to spend an estimated $40.7 million on advertising and promotion in 1972, according to the 19th Annual Advertising Survey of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, released here today.

This represents a 16 per cent increase from the $34.9 million initially budgeted for 1971, but is only slightly above the $40.02 million which the industry actually expects to spend by the end of this year. Both figures are considerably below the $53.4 million spent in 1970 on advertising and promotion when budgets were increased substantially to cover the cost of special merchandising campaigns aimed at curbing disintermediation.

Meanwhile, the survey revealed that newspapers retained their leading position as the savings bank industry's favorite ad medium.

The survey is a continuing program of the NAMSB Committee on Information and Marketing, headed by Chester L. Nourse Jr., president of the Lynn (Mass.) Five Cents Savings Bank. Nourse is also currently serving as president of the Savings Institutions Marketing Society of America.

According to data supplied by 412 of the nation's 491 mutual savings banks:

—The average estimated advertising and promotion expenditure per bank in 1972 will be $98,850, up slightly from the $97,137 average of 1971;

—While the average per-bank anticipated expenditure in most deposit-size categories reflects the modest over-all industry increase, survey data points to a slight reduction by the largest banks, with those in the "over $300 million deposit" category planning an average expenditure of $448,581 for 1972 compared with an average of $449,644 for 1971 (anticipated spending by individual banks in this category ranges from $60,000 to $1,750,000);

—Newspapers remained the dominant advertising medium for savings banks with 46 per cent of expenditures allocated to this category in 1971 (exactly the same percentages as reported in 1970);

—Radio ranked second in usage by savings banks, receiving 15 per cent of the ad budget (a one per cent increase from 1970);

—Other media utilized included premiums (9 per cent, community relations (5 per cent, printed literature (5 per cent, billboards (4 per cent window lobby display (3 per cent, direct mail (3 per cent, car and bus cards (1 per cent, and "other" (6 per cent;

—The 1971 average per-bank expenditure of $35,936 on special non-recurring new account campaigns was well under the $113,810 spent in this category during 1970, the year of heavy premium promotion.

Service Stations Hit Changing Gas Prices

WEST NYACK — The Orange - Rockland Gasoline Dealers Association, Inc., of West Nyack, has sent out an appeal to its customers urging them to write letters of complaint to individual oil companies concerning the constant change in gasoline prices, which often fluctuate from week to week.

Their letter to customers throughout the Hudson Valley region reads as follows:

"Our fingers are numb from the constant changing of our gasoline pump prices.

"Our backs are weary from the constant lugging of our price signs.

"Our nerves are frayed, and our tempers are short, for we never know from day to day when the telephone will ring, and the voice at the other end will tell us that the price has changed again.

"Then we must face you, our customers, and try to explain to you — WHY. We know you don't believe us when we tell you that we can do nothing about it, and we really don't blame you for not believing us, because we are supposed to be independent businessmen, who control our own businesses. But we ARE telling you the truth.

"We do not, and cannot, control the insane up and down prices at our gasoline pumps. We are but "slaves" to our major oil company suppliers. They, and they alone, control these changes.

"Many of us have already given up in disgust, and quit this business. Many more of us are at this moment thinking of giving up, for we know if we do not "stay in line" our leases will not be renewed, and we will be out of business.

"We would like to market our product to you on a basis that would permit you to know from day to day what it would cost you for gasoline at our stations, but unfortunately, we have been unable to do so. We are constantly working towards this end, and sincerely hope we can soon achieve this goal.

"You, the customer, can help us. Complain to the company who markets your favorite brand. Your lease cannot be canceled," the statement concluded.

PIONEER FLOAT—Margo Lynn Johnson, Queen of the 1972 Tournament of Roses, holds the design for a special float for the New Year's Day Rose Parade to be entered by the Telephone Pioneers of America. The float, to be titled "People Helping People," is a salute to the 60th anniversary of community service by the Pioneers, an association of 350,000 telephone employes.

County Study Authorized On Police Communications

KINGSTON — The State Crime Control Planning Board has authorized the Division of Criminal Justice to prepare a contract for a $10,220 grant award for a county-wide police communications study for Ulster County.

County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago announced today that the proposed contract for the study is exected within a few days and will put in motion a communication system design that has been a project of Legislator Clifford Snyder, R-Saugerties, and his Sheriff's Committee. The grant award will come under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The total program of study will cost $13,321 with the various law enforcement agencies picking up the remainder or 25 per cent of in kind services (equipment and services of police officials).

The project will embrace all police agencies expect State Police.

According to Legislator Snyder all of these units have agreed to participation which will eventually provide a communications tie county-wide.

When the study is completed and approved, the city, town and villages involved in the study can purchase the necessary communications equipment recommended by the study for 25 per cent of the cost with the Federal government picking up the remaining 75 per cent, Snyder said.

Systems Planning Associates Inc., of Durham, N. C., was recently awarded the $10,220.56 contract to conduct the study. Systems Planning was the lowest bidder among the three submitted.

The contract will call for completion of the project study by April 30, 1972 to detail the equipment and personnel requirements of an improved police communications system for Ulster County, its city, towns and villages.

The County Advisory Committee working on the project includes Sheriff William B. Martin, County Fire Coordinator Ray Morris, Woodstock Police Chief William E. Waterous and Kingston Police Sergeant Otto Short.

GOP Dumps Dye for Snyder

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON — Ulster County Republican Legislators dumped their majority leader, Douglas V. Dye Monday night and, as predicted in Monday's Freeman, elected Clifford Snyder to the post on the second ballot. Dye who represnts Dist. 2, ran third in a field of three.

The first ballot gave Snyder, of Dist. 1, 10 of 23 votes with seven going to Brian White (R-Dist. 9) and six to Dye. On the second ballot, Snyder received 14 votes and White, nine.

Reportedly angry and dissappointed, Dye blamed his leadership loss on his recent vote against the 1972 Ulster County budget which he helped draft. Many legislators, however, have indicated disenchantment with the majority leadership for some time and much in advance of budget preparation.

The GOP caucus also concerned itself with the selection of a county Highway superintendent to fill an existing vacancy which has been temporarily held by acting superintendent George Fitchner.

Final selection is expected momentarily with Jose Camallonga Jr. of Poughkeepsie favored for the post over another candidate, Robert Morrow of Tillson. Camallonga is district local coordinating engineer for the New York Department of Transportation. Morrow is an employe of IBM.

Discussion also centered on the naming of a welfare commissioner to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Joseph Fitzsimmons. There are many applicants for the post and a decision is expected hopefully within a month.

Snyder, who will be named offically to the majority leadership in January, faces what promises to be another active year for the Legislature with such things as the completion of the new jail and infirmary anticipated and the negotiations of contracts with the Community College and the Civil Service Employes Association.

Snyder, as chairman of the Sheriff's Committee of the Legislature, has guided the plans for the new county jail construction on Golden Hill. A proponent of a county-wide communications system between various police agencies, he has also served on such committees as the Conservation, Data Processing and Printing, Finance, Legislative and Rules and the Recreation and Youth committees.

Employed by IBM as a manager of the Programming Systems Computer Center, he has also been active in community affairs, assuming the leadership of Heart Fund and Boy Scout financial drives and serving as president of the Saugerties Republican Club. Snyder has held membership in VFW, Sportsmen's Club, American Legion, Glasco Fire Department, Saugerties Babe Ruth League and the Ulster Lodge FAM.

The selection of new leadership for the Democratic members of the Legislature will take place Thursday night after the regular meeting of the Legislature in the County Office Building.

The 10 Democrats are expected to name Dr. Gerald P. Gorman (D-City) as minority leader to fill the vacancy to be created by Roger B. Mabie (D-Dist. 7) who did not seek another term on the county board.

$32.8 Million Second Suit Filed by Ex-Constable

By HUGH REYNOLDS

ROSENDALE — Franz Muller, 33, a former Town of Rosendale constable, is suing a number of town officials and other town residents, charging them with "harassment" and a "smear" campaign against him, this one for $32.8 million in Ulster County Supreme Court.

On Dec. 7, Muller filed a $10 million suit against many of the same persons in federal court. His attorney, Herbert Weinsoff of Ellenville, told The Freeman today that his client has agreed to a request for a continuance in that suit until Feb. 10.

In the federal suit Muller, a resident of Route 32, Rosendale, claimed that his health was affected and his constitutional rights violated as a result of his Dec. 9, 1970 arrest for grand larceny. Muller, a town constable at the time, was arrested by state police for allegedly stealing a $7,500 front-end loader owned by Arthur Champion of Rosendale.

Named as defendants in that suit were the Towns of Rosendale and Ulster, Town of Ulster Justice Arthur A. Reilly, State Police BCI Officers David Wachtel and William E. Wiedemann, former Rosendale Chief Constable Robert Doyne and Champion, who signed the complaint leading to Muller's arrest. Muller's case was turned over to the Ulster County Grand Jury which refused to hand down an indictment charging him with the crime in August of 1971.

Muller's $32.8 million suit, filed Monday, names as defendants, Rosendale Town Supervisor Gerald DeFelicis, Councilman Karl Stroble, Magistrate Raymond LeFever, Constables William McKay and James Warnott, Mayor Carl Grassi, Town Republican Chairman Ernest Hopper and Ernest Kelder and Louis DeFelicis, described as town residents and Shane Crosby, described as a Kingston Freeman employe.

Editor's Note: Shane Crosby has not been an employe of The Daily Freeman since April 23, 1970.)

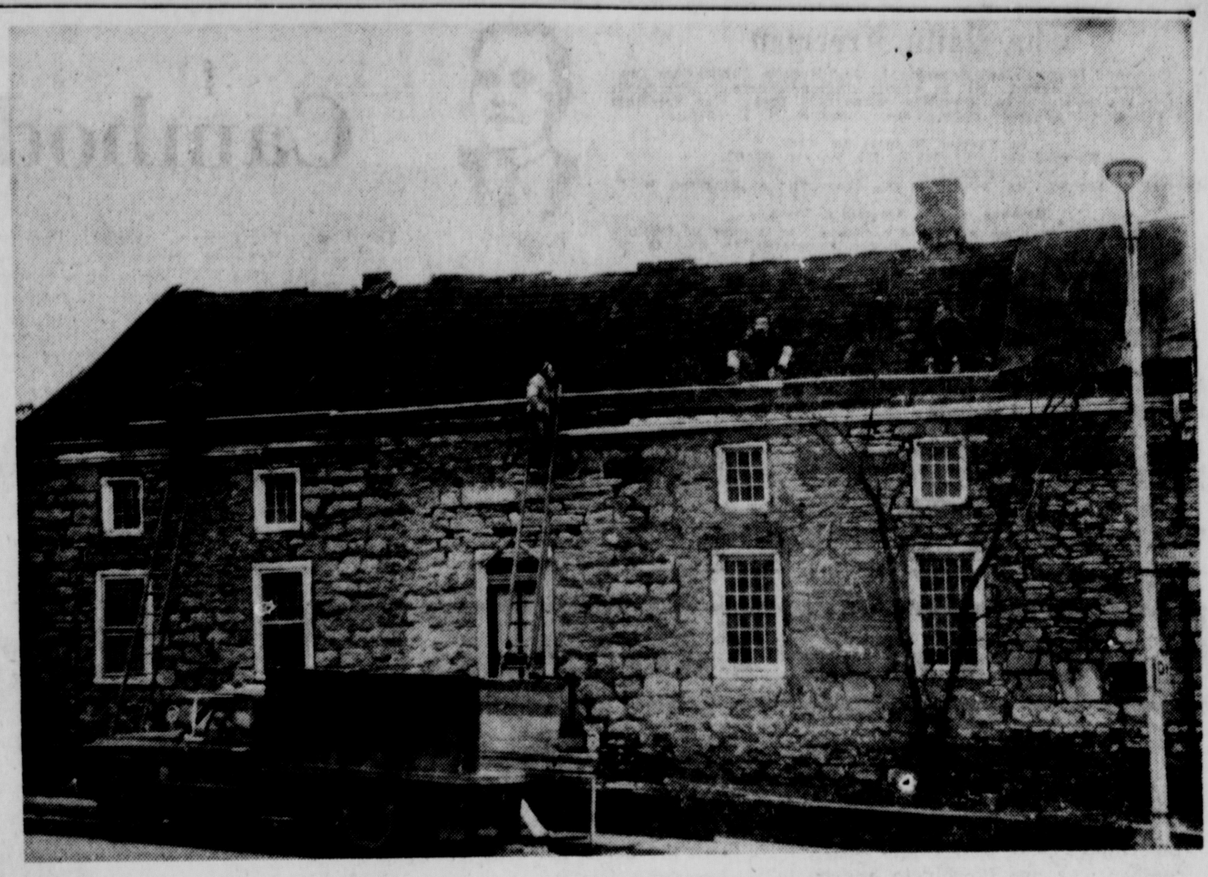

The events involved in the federal suit took place on Dec. 9, 1970, the date of Muller's arrest for grand larceny. The events involved in the Supreme Court suit, according to Muller's attorney, Weinsoff, took place "after that and right through Nov. 2, 1971."

In his summons filed Monday, Muller charges that those officials and residents of the town acted as art of "a political machine" to suppress criticism, supress freedom of comment and freedom of action for the advancement of good government and the fair and proper administration of justice and to prevent the disclosure of information, all by bringing undue and extreme pressure against and upon plaintiff and others . . ."

Muller states, in his summons, that Stroble, DeFelicis and Warnott, conducted a campaign of harassment and intimidation, used wire taps and alleged that he was involved in burglaries, jewel thefts and other crimes. Muller said he feared "more violent means of harassment."

Muller told The Freeman in an interview on Dec. 14 that he was being harassed because he asked for an investigation into reports that four Rosendale constables owned "serious police records."

The defendants in Muller's latest suit have 20 days to answer the charges.

REPAIR ROOF — Workmen fix shingles on the roof of an old stone house at the corner of North Front Street and Green Street following Friday's heavy wind storm which caused extensive damage to the roof. College Figures Drop

The drop of enrollment by 110,000 in the college year that began last September was due largely to a drop in freshman enrollment, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education found.

While total undergraduate enrollment increased by 2.4 per cent over 1970 levels, the slowdown in the increase of freshmen left 110,000 places unfilled in the 1,500 four-year public and private colleges throughout the country.

At the same time, minority enrollment took a dramatic jump with a 15 per cent rise in enrollment for blacks and 25 per cent increase for students with Spanish names.

There has been considerable resistance to college in the entering age group, due in part to the draft and the uncertainty of receiving deferment under the new regulations. Some have migrated to Canada and thus evaded both the draft and college.

On the other hand, the increase in minority enrollment, especially among black students who are realizing the advantages of higher education, has begun to encroach on the old "black-only" colleges. Their plight is critical as they see students who would normally attend black colleges being wooed by white-dominated colleges and universities the country over.

The situation of the colleges and universities is part of the larger youth problem of the day. The majority of college-oriented youth are going to college, preparing to take their place in life. The rest are rebelling, not alone about education, but about life itself. They will have to get that out of their systems before they find their place and their future.

Interest in the Court

When the Senate confirmed President Nixon latest two appointees to the Supreme Court—Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist—it completed the transformation of the court from a liberal activist judiciary to one of judicial self-restraint.

In the Warren era, social change decisions followed each other in dizzying order—school desegregation, ban on prayer in the public schools, one-man, one-vote, the emphasis on the rights of individuals against the state. They were not always unanimous decisions, or even lopsided majorities. But the social activists could usually must at least a 5 to 4 majority.

The change began in October, 1968, when the Senate by filibuster blocked the elevation of Associate Justice Abe Fortas to be Chief Justice, and he resigned from the bench. The appointment was left to the new President and Mr. Nixon made his first nomination to fit the aim he had expressed—"I pledge to nominate individuals who share my judicial philosophy, which is basically a conservative philosophy I believe in a strict interpretation of the Supreme Court's functions."

After Chief Justice Warren Burger came his fellow Minnesotan, Harry A. Blackman. Powell and Rehnquist round out a quartet to Nixon's liking. He is one of the few presidents in our history to make four nominations to the high court in his first term. What is more, he has revolutionized the court by appointing men of more similar approach and philosophy than those of any other predecessor.

In criticizing the Supreme Court in 1968, Mr. Nixon found fault with its decisions in the field of law and order. He declared that its decisions had weakened "the peace forces as against the criminal forces."

The Miranda case in 1966 is often cited as the beginning of softness toward criminals. It decreed that police, before investigating suspects, must inform them of their constitutional rights, including the right of counsel, if necessary appointed, and the right to remain silent. Prosecutors and police feel this put the rights of individuals before the state's, aided criminals and jeopardized convictions. It was a 5 to 4 decision. It may be one of the first to fall, should the question be brought before the Nixon Supreme Court.

There are three liberal holdovers—William O. Douglas, Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White and Potter Stewart occasionally side with them. They may be the swing men, the balance of power, in the new court. It will be most interesting to watch the nine men operate in the new year.

Cambodian Corruption Continues

WASHINGTON — The Vietnam story, like a rerun of a bad movie, is repeating itself across the border in Cambodia.

Cambodian strongman Lon Nol has plunged his government into disarray. His top aides have sought, in vain, to persuade him to step down. Now they are talking ominously of a coup.

The military effort to stop a communist takeover is floundering. Communist forces have now surrounded Cambodia's capital, Phnom Penh, on three sides.

The U.S., typically, is trying to solve the crisis by rushing more supplies to bail out Lon Nol. Because of congressional opposition, some supplies are being sneaked through pressure upon other allies to come to Lon Nol's aid.

A secret intelligence report, meanwhile, describes him as "a sick man, both physically and mentally . . . . His memory is faulty, and he tends to make snap judgements without reference to anything anyone has told him."

No less than American Ambassador Emory Swank, in a report intended for official U.S. eyes only, has criticized "Lon Nol's haphazard, out-of-channel and ill-coordinated conduct of military operations."

Swnak blames recent Cambodian military reverses, coasting "substantial losses to men and equipment," upon "ineffective leadership and tactics."

Another intelligence report describes most Cambodian general officers as "simply incompetent." It states that only one top general, besides Lon Nol, "has the ability and force of personality to exercise leadership" at the Chief of Staff level.

Cambodian Corruption

He is identified as Brig. Gen. Srey Saman, now Cambodia's defense attache in Djakarta, the Indonesian capital. But the report adds sadly that "Srey Saman's personal authority is diluted by a tendency toward financial corruption."

Two other top officers, Brig. Gen. Sosthene Fernandez and Brig. Gen. Mao Sum Khem, are also called "technically incompetent." But the report charges "both have personal weaknesses which prevent them from exercising effective control over unit commanders.

"Sosthene Fernandez is an enveterate gambler, while Mao Sum Kem is a compulsive womanizer. Neither activity is in itself disqualifying, but in these two cases, so much time is consumed, so much corrupt activity is required to finance the activity that they have lost an essential measure of the respect required to exert real leadership."

The personnel chief, Brig. Sen. Peolim Var, is accused by the report of sending inspection teams, which "are bought off by commanders of the units whose payrolls they are supposed to verify."

These sound distressingly like the secret reports of South Vietnamese incompetence and corruption that U.S. officials have tried to keep from the public.

The communist drive on Phnom Penh, according to U.S. estimates, was intended as a psychological rather than a military operation. Apparently, the communists never expected any real military success but intended to withdraw to their former positions after harassing the city.

Cambodian bungling, however, has turned a hit-and-run psychological attack into a real military threat.

Secret Assessment

Declares one secret military assessment: "Enemy forces have continued to maintain pressure on Pnom Penh. Their presence in strength has generated concern; yet government forces to date have been unable to react effectively . . . .

These dispatches read like the secret reports that came out of South Vietnam during the 1960s.

Footnote: Lon Nol's top ministers called on him at his residence on December 7 and suggested that he relinquish some of his authority. "Lon Nol rejected to relinquish personal direction of military affairs, ascribed recent reverses to inadequate South Vietnamese military support and the limitations on U.S. assistance, and lectured the group on the need to recruit and equip 50,000 new soldiers using whatever in-country or third-country resources are available . . . . . (The ministers) reportedly received this lecture in silence and did not defend their views."

Rueful Bhutto

Pakistan's new President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban ended up side by side at the United Nations dinner honoring outgoing Secretary General Thant the other night.

The UN had passed overwhelmingly the ceasefire resolution proposed by Bhutto to end the war between India and Pakistan. The resolution, of course, came too late to stop India from seizing control of East Pakistan.

Eban congratulated Bhutto on the solid majority he had gotten for the ceasefire resolution. Replied Bhutto ruefully: "I would rather have the territory without the resolution than the resolution without the territory."

"Mind if I Look Over Your Shoulder?"

Bonds as Indicators

This column has mentioned President Nixon's stake in the stock market. No administration in history ever has been re-elected to office in a bear (declining) market. But the even more consequential news for 1972 is the new strength in bonds.

This is fundamental and the turnaround from the horrendous fall that began in 1969 is absolutely basic for the welfare of our distracted public. For when the demand for bonds dries up, our lives receive a check—like a tree that has been blasted by frost.

The stock market, watched so closely—and sometimes breathlessly—by countless millions, is a source for corporate funds. These mean jobs, payrolls, expansion. In this common stocks have a vital role. But the biggest and most powerful workhorses in our economy are bonds.

Common stocks are, in effect, fractional partnerships in companies. You pay your money, you own your fractional share of the company, and you take your chances. And when you buy this share you must buy all the uncertainties that go with it. Here today, and tomorrow where?

In contrast, industrial and utility bonds are mortgages on the companies' property. This is overwhelmingly the largest and most important source for new corporate capital and few in all our public can be expected to realize what we have riding on the demand for these sober, unglamorous workhorses.

For example, the electric power utilities face a nearly incredible need for expansion. The Federal Trade Commission tells me that by the year 2000 our country will demand eight times as much electric power as it uses now. General Electric officials tell me that in the next 10 years as much additional electrical equipment must be built as has been built throughout the equipment industry's entire 81-year history.

Each central power station costs so much and takes so long to build that the utilities' purchases must be financed by bonds. Additionally, their unbelieavably expensive nuclear power plants compound the problem and have been a tremendous disappointment. It is now taking around seven years to build these, plus the delays by those who fear their danger and contamination. Originally, the utilities thought it would take about two years. The costs — meaning the need for bonds—have gone up equivalently.

Oil exploration costs have gone up more than 500 per cent in the past two decades. Yet one American company alone must locate a million barrels of oil a day to serve its refineries. It is a vast industry which must rely primarily on bonds.

Our railroads must invest an estimated $30 billion during the next 10 years to meet their traffic requirements. They must depend on bonds like an oasis depends on water. And so goes with the telephone, steel and other industries at the core of our economy.

On the demand side the profound worry was signalled in a 1969 percentage loss in bonds, supposedly less risky than stocks, which actually exceed that year's shattering fall in stocks.

The Dow Jones Industrial average began 1969 at 943, not far from the all-time high. It fell about 16 per cent. The bond market average began near its all-time low, fell an added 20 per cent in 1969 and stayed right on this toboggan slide in 1970 and much of 1971.

Nine prime U.S. Government issues, marketed at $100, fell below $70. They lost 30 per cent of their value. And with this the demand for industrial and utility bonds at reasonable rates literally vanished, like a rabbit bolting for its hole.

As one result, as late as about six months ago every major bank and every large insurance company in the United States had an immense, shattering, red-ink loss in its bond portfolio.

The big steady, indispensable buyers of bonds, beyond banks and insurance companies, are pension portfolios, trust funds, educational endowment funds, etc. And the great, tidelike sweep upward in the demand for bonds since money rates have fallen carries a profound relief in terms of our country's basic expansion.

We all want a good 1972 stock market, but the absolutely vital harbinger is this betterment in the market for bonds—the workhorses on which we depend.

Ray Cromley Says

Peace Hopes Dashed by Soviets

WASHINGTON (NEA)—It is difficult to describe how infuriated President Nixon's advisors are at Russian Premier Leonid Brezhnev for the role he has played in the India-Pakistan war.

The Soviet attitude and the suspicions it has raised here threaten the whole fabric of U.S.-Soviet negotiations—the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the Middle East pacification attempts, the hoped for meetings on mutual troop reductions in Europe and the widening of civilian contacts.

For the Nixon approach had been based on the thesis that a meaningful accord with the Soviet Union was possible only if Moscow was ready to accept a less war-like, trouble-stirring role and to cooperate as a peace-maker in the world's trouble spots.

Mr. Nixon's advisors see no hope of any meaningful settlement with the Soviet Union if Russia is still actively bent on developing its power by encouraging regional wars, enforced if there is not the will to abide by the written words and the spirit of whatever is signed.

A few months ago, there had been high hopes here. The Russian attitude in the SALT talks were tough but realistic. Moscow seemed to be moving to reasonable ground on Berlin and toward a detente with West Europe. Soviet leaders apparently were taking a more moderate position in the Middle East.

But then, as some of Mr. Nixon's chief advisors saw it, the Russian attitude began to shift. In Europe, the Soviet Union started dragging its feet on conciliation. Brezhnev's associates have failed even to receive the NATO representative sent to explore Moscow's views on mutual force reductions. The Russians set new roadblocks in the way of bringing the Berlin settlement into force.

Moscow began sending added arms to the Arab countries at a rate which would upset the perilous balance with Israel.

Even as these doubts were building within the administration, the India-Pakistan war exploded.

What bothers the White House and State Department is not that Moscow has politically backed one side—India. That kind of partisan stand is easily understood.

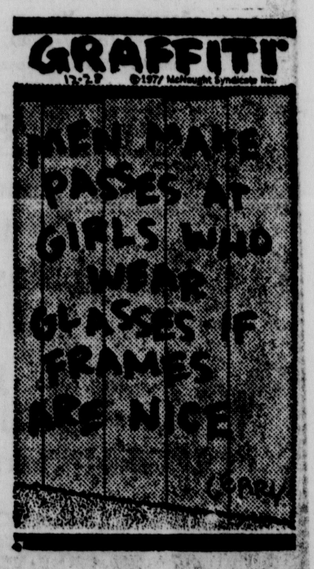

It's rather that the Soviet Union consistently refused to do anything to prevent the war during the eight months that followed the March 25 Pakistan military action in East Bengal.

The United States in its months of negotiating with Pakistan and India, kept the Soviet Union informed. U.S. officials all but pleaded with the Russians to do something-anything—to help settle the East Pakistan problem peacefully in a way that would meet India's domestic needs and not destroy the Pakistani. Barring such Soviet action, Washington hoped Moscow would exercise some restraint on New Delhi to stave off open war in order to give negotiations a chance.

The Russians turned a cold shoulder to all attempts to involve them in a peace effort.

There is a strong belief here that Moscow was bent on encouraging military action as part of its own program for surrounding mainland China. It is difficult for officials here to forget the Soviet role in sparking the Arab-Israeli war. Now it's India-Pakistan. And what next?

While there is no plan here to give up or to cancel out on the SALT treaty hopes, there is less confidence now that there will be a dentente of the type that this administration dreamed of a few months back.

Some Early Bickering at Legislature Session

SMALL TURNOUT AT OPENING SESSION OF STATE ASSEMBLY (UPI TELEPHOTO)

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The special session of the legislature was only a few minutes old Monday when the bickering started.

Many think the legislature, called to consider Gov. Rockefeller's taxing and revenue proposals, should not be meeting at all. "I think it's ridiculous," said Assemblyman Edward M. Kinsella, R-Solvay.

Kinsella introduced a motion that the legislature adjourn until Jan. 5, when the regular session opens, for the discussion of the package.

Majority Leader John E. Kingson, R-Westbury, and Minority Leader Stanley Steingut, D-Brooklyn, spoke against the motion—Steingut after a speech blaming Rockefeller for the state's fiscal ills—but Kinsella was not dismayed. "We have acted hastily in past years on budget problems," he said. "We need more time for study."

The motion was soundly defeated in a voice vote.

Procedural resolutions attracted objections.

Assemblyman Chester Straub, D-Brooklyn, complained that all bills introduced in the session must be submitted to the Republican-controlled Rules Committee. A roll call was taken on his complaint and it also was defeated.

Democrats did force a delay in the proceedings by demanding a copy of each resolution that was submitted. Copies were made and dstributed and approved—but not unanimously.

Sen. Bernard Gordon, R-Peekskill, and Sen. Murray Schwartz, D-Queens, conveyed a message to the Assembly that the Senate had organized and was ready to meet. The two men were received with friendly boos and hisses.

The Senate, in contrast, met briefly during the afternoon with none of the rancor evident in the Assembly.

It perhaps was appropriate that the Assembly was contentious, for most of the objections to Gov. Rockefeller's fiscal program are expected to originate in that house.

In the last legislative session, resistance from Speaker Perry B. Duryea and rank-and-file Republican assemblymen forced a $756-million reduction in Gov. Rockefeller's proposed $8.4 billion spending plan. They also trimmed more than half of Gov. Rockefeller's request for $1 billion in tax increases.

New York City Subway Patrons Still Wondering

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — With 1971 ebbing, the patient patrons of the New York City subways still don't know how much they will be paying for a ride come the new year—if there is anything to ride.

The question may be academic for a time if a contract settlement is not reached and transit workers strike New Year's Day.

But whatever the results of the labor negotiations, the day will soon come when the denizens of the deep have to line up at the token booths knowing how much a ride is going to cost them.

Most likely is a rise in the current 30-cent city subway and bus fare to 35 cents. That will be the case if Gov. Rockefeller's transit plan is accepted by the special session of the legislature now meeting.

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) which runs the buses and subways through the Transit Authority, is not saying when a new fare would go into effect. But a week or 10 days into January appears likely.

The MTA has not said what would happen if action on the plan is not completed until the regular session begins Jan. 5. Rockefeller, in presenting two bills Monday to implement his plan, warned the legislators that failure to enact them would mean a 45-cent fare.

The governor's legislation provides for a $100 million state loan to the Transit Authority if federal aid is not forthcoming, authorization for a city loan of another $100 million and Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority surpluses to the parent MTA.

A major part of the plan is increased tolls on Triborough facilities, which can be accomplished without legislation.

The plan is the residue of an agreement among Rockefeller, Mayor John V. Lindsay and MTA Chairman William J. Ronan that could have preserved the 30-cent fare if the transportation bond issue had not been defeated.

The 35-cent fare would be guaranteed for two years, a period during which the city transit deficit is estimated to reach more than $400 million—exactly how much depends on the labor settlement.

The fate of Rockefeller's transportation proposals is bound up with his measures to raise $427 million in new taxes and close an estimated $1.5 billion state deficit over the next 15 months.

With some Republicans balking, the governor has a persuasive instrument in the state loan for the transit system to get city Democrats to back his tax package.

Waiting in the wings is an alternate transit plan being pushed by several Democrats. Sponsors say it would save the 30-cent fare. It does not deal with the commuter lines.

Under this proposal, a joint employer-employe payroll tax and a 10-per-cent surcharge on the unincorporated business tax would be imposed in the city.

Sen. Jeremiah B. Bloom, the Brooklyn Democrat who is one of the sponsors, said Monday a city resident could expect to pay $5 to $10 a year in additional taxes in lieu of higher fares.

But the measure is likely to be considered only if Rockefeller's plan is thumbed down. Lindsay and the Democratic legislative leaders have held themselves aloof from the alternative.

All of which leaves the subway straphanger wondering what the New Year's resolution will be.

State Tobacco Industry Fears Bootlegging

NEW YORK (UPI)—A spokesman for New York's tobacco trades says the state's revenue estimate for the proposed cigarette tax increase has conceded a $20 million revenue loss to cigarette bootleggers.

Morris Weintraub, managing director of the Wholesale Tobacco Distributors of New York Inc., made the charge in a letter to state legislators released Monday.

The industry letter urged legislators to challenge the state revenue estimate for the proposed three-cent cigarette tax hike.

"An increase from 12 cents to 15 cents a pack should produce $82 million—not $62 million (for 15 months) as estimated by the budget director," Weintraub said. "We feel he has already written it (the $20 million) off to organized crime and more cigarette bootlegging."

Weintraub charged that the Rockefeller administration's revenue estimates concede another 140 million packs of bootlegged cigarettes to the 360 million packs lost to individuals and organized crime.

The new proposal would increase cigarette taxes to 15 cents a pack in the state, and boost New York City cigarette taxes to as high as 26 cents a pack.

Weintraub predicted that "Soon, the legitimate New York tobacco trade will become extinct as the distribution of cigarettes is controlled by organized crime."

State Booklet Gives VD Facts

ALBANY

A new State Health Department booklet—"Help Zap VD"—outlining the facts about venereal disease will be available without charge to all New York residents, Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, State health commissioner, announced today.

"Except for the flu and the common cold, VD is the most widespread communicable disease in the nation," Dr. Ingraham said. "It is estimated that 350,000 New Yorkers in the 15-29 age group will contract VD during 1972.

"But in spite of the fact that VD is a spreading epidemic, most people know little or nothing about it. Because venereal disease is spread by direct sexual contact, it is not considered a subject for 'polite conversation.' Therefore, teenagers and adults alike continue to believe myths and rumors about VD. Our new booklet is written in frank, non-technical language, and aims to dispel myths about VD," he said.

The booklet covers all important facts about VD, including: symptoms, examinations and tests used to detect its presence, and preventive measures to stop its spread.

The booklet also points out the importance of early treatment for syphilis and gonorrhea. "While the early symptoms may disappear without treatment, the infection remains in the body and can do permanent damage if left untreated," Dr. Ingraham warned.

"Young people frequently don't seek treatment because they are embarrassed or don't want their parents to find out they have the disease," he said. "To counter these fears, New York State law now permits physicians and clinics to treat minors for VD without parental knowledge or consent."

The eight-page booklet will be distributed through county and city health departments across the state.

Individuals may also obtain a copy without charge by writing to: VD, Public Inquiries Section, New York State Department of Health, Albany, New York 12208.

Remarks by Connally Arouses Ire of Japanese Auto Manufacturers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Treasury Secretary John Connally, whose remarks often set off sparks, has aroused the ire of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association.

Connally was quoted as saying that, "while a Ford Pinto sells for $2,200 in the United States, it sells for more than $5,000 in Japan becasue of a high tariff and discriminatory commodity taxes."

Low Bridge Bid Is Submitted By Massapequa Firm

KINGSTON — A Massapequa firm has submitted a low bid of $658,834 for the reinforcement of Pier 20 on the Kingston-Rhinecliff Bridge.

The work, which will begin this spring for a December, 1972 completion, will include the strengthening of the pier by installing a bulkhead of steel pilings around the base and filling the enclosure with concrete. The pier is near the east shore of the Hudson.

Seven bids were received, the State Department of Transportation reported, with Donald E. Hernly of Massapequa, the apparent low bidder. A contract will be awarded following a routine check of all bids received. Work will be supervised by M. Nicholas Sinacori, Department of Transportation regional director, headquartered at Poughkeepsie. The work will be paid for by the New York State Bridge Authority, operator of five bridges in the Mid-Hudson Valley, the Rip Van Winkle Bridge at Catskill, the Mid-Hudson Bridge at Poughkeepsie, the Newburgh-Beacon Bridge and the Bear Mountain Bridge.

State approval for the construction of the bridge came in 1947 with a bill sponsored by former State Senator Arthur H. Wicks of Kingston and former Assemblyman Ernest I. Hatfield of Poughkeepsie and signed into law by former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. Preliminary work began in 1954 and the cornerstone was laid on May 27, 1955. Dr. David B. Steinman of New York City was the designer of the bridge which replaced a ferry service from Kingston to Rhinecliff.

The bridge cost $18,500,000 to build, stretches a mile and a half across the Hudson River and is 253 feet above low water at its highest point. The bridge has three, 12-foot traffic lanes and two emergency walks, each two-feet wide.

Original plans call for the construction of the bridge between Kingston Point and Rhinecliff but further engineering studies dictated its present location.

The bridge was officially opened on Feb. 2, 1957 with a host of state and local dignitaries on hand for the ribbon-cutting. Former Gov. Averell Harriman was in attendance along with (former) State Senator R. Watson Pomeroy, Mayor Fred C. Stang, Nancy Heppner. Assemblyman Ken-neth L. Wilson and Kingston Authority, Ernest Heppner of Crane Street, a member of the Bridge cut the ribbon, 13-year-old daughter opening the bridge to traffic.

Christmas Holiday Weekend Claimed Total of 645 Lives

By United Press International

Traffic accidents during the three-day Christmas holiday weekend claimed 645 lives—25 more than a National Safety Council estimate before the 78-hour period began.

The 645 deaths was 141 above last year's total for the Christmas period and 40 above the 595 deaths reported over the 102-hour Thanksgiving weekend.

The National Safety Council had estimated that between 520 and 620 persons would die in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. local time Thursday and midnight Sunday.

"A fast-growing population combined with a tremendous increase in the number of registered motor vehicles and licensed drivers continue to translate the nation's otherwise improved accident rates into intolerable numbers of persons killed and injured," National Safety Council President Howard Pyle said Monday.

"The need for a commitment to traffic safety over the New Year's weekend should be obvious."

The council estimates that between 400 and 500 persons will be killed during the 78-hour New Year's weekend.

California reported 70 traffic fatalities, the highest for a 78-hour period since the state reported 64 persons killed in 1950. Florida and Texas each had 44 traffic deaths, Georgia 34, New York 30, Pennsylvania 28, North Carolina 27, Missouri 26, Ohio 23 and Michigan 20.

Only two states, Idaho and Maine, and the District of Columbia got through the weekend without traffic fatalities.

The final United Press International count also showed 63 persons killed in fires, 16 were killed in plane crashes and 38 died in other accidents.

Duo Sentenced In Bank Robbery

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Harold P. Burke sentenced two men Monday to prison terms for their part in the June 7 holdup of a Rochester branch bank.

Burke sentenced William Hurst, 33, of New York City to six years in prison and David Fine, 35, to a four year term for the $6,200 robbery of a branch office of the First Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

The two were convicted two weeks ago by a federal court jury.

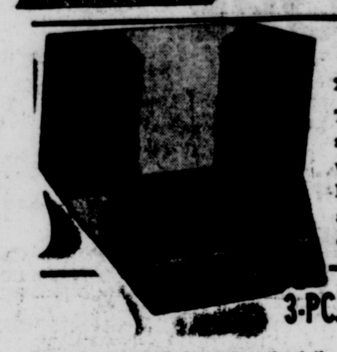

A third man—Anton Reyes, 32, of Rochester—will be sentenced at a later date. He pleaded guilty in November to one count of a seven-count indictment in the case and later appeared as a government witness at the trial of Hurst and Fine.

State Court Judge Bars Special Meeting

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A State Supreme Court Judge has barred the State Democratic Committee from convening a special meeting today to select a successor to outgoing State Chairman John J. Burns.

In his decision handed down Monday following oral argument on the issue, Justice Frank P. DeLuca said the meeting, called last week, was "contrary to the rules" of the state committee and therefor "void."

Burns, however, later said he planned to file an appeal this morning with the Appellate Division in Brooklyn. He said he was not officially cancelling the meeting, scheduled for 2 p.m. today at the Americana Hotel in Manhattan.

Burns announced recently his intention to step down at the end of the year to promote the impending bid for the Democratic presidential nomination by New York Mayor John V. Lindsay.

The leading contender to succeed Burns is reported to be Joseph Crangle, the Erie County part ychairman.

The court challenge to the special state committee meeting was brought by Suffolk County Democratic leader Dominic J. Baranello, who is said to be interested in the $30,000-a-year state chairman post.

Baranello charged that the meeting was hastily and improperly called without adequate opportunity for all 345 state committeemen to participate in a decision "crucially important in this coming election year."

In issuing the injunction against the state committee, DeLuca said the party leadership has two basic options open:

—The state committee can reissue notice of a meeting in conformity with the party's rules and procedures, or

—Burns may resign and permit Roberts rules of parliamentary procedure to take effect in the selection of a successor.

The judge indicated that under the standard parliamentary rules, the state chairman's successor would be the committee's first vice president, currently Mrs. Mae Gurevich of Manhattan.

Burns, though, said a successor had been named at a special meeting the last two times a chairman resigned.

Burns also said that if the Appelate Division affirms the ruling by DeLuca, he will stay on as chairman.

"I'm not hinting that I want to stay on, but then again, I don't want to leave the party in a state of disarray," he said.

Widower Files Law Suit in Wife's Death

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The widower of a mother of four children has filed a $1.5 million suit in State Supreme Court here, accusing a birth-control pill manufacturer, two hospitals and two local doctors of negligence resulting in his wife's death three years ago.

The suit became known Monday when Justice John T. Casey, presiding at special term here, was asked to consolidate several related proceedings, including defendants' replies, into a single action for trial.

William J. Kelly of suburban Loudonville sued G.D. Searle & Co. of Chicago, charging in court papers that a birth-control pill made by it, Enovid, and prescribed for his wife for three years by physicians was "negligently made" and was not accompanied by a warning "of the side effects of the drug."

Mrs. Jayne Ellen Kelly, whose children ranged in age at the time of her death from 3 to 14 years old, died at St. Peter's Hospital here Nov. 14, 1968.

The court papers indicate Mrs. Kelly became ill Oct. 29, 1968, was treated at Memorial Hospital and died six days after being admitted to St. Peter's.

Her illness, described in the court papers as "a sudden blood disorder" stemming from a loss of clotting capacities, led to brain damage and "a rapid downhill course resulting in her death."

Searle has denied in briefs filed with the court the allegations made by Kelly.

Accidental Shooting Death

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) A Schenectady teenager was shot to death by a playmate Monday in an incident Schenectady County District Attorney Elbert Watrous said "appeared to be accidental in nature."

Watrous said Robert Perry, 14, and a 13-year-old companion were playing in a bedroom when a B-B gun and a 16-gauge shotgun had been left on a bed. He said an older brother of the dead youth had recently returned from hunting and left the loaded weapon there.

Charges Are Dropped in Police Aid Case

KINGSTON

A charge of refusing to aid a police officer lodged against Larry Snyder, 25, of 130 Elmendorf Street, this city, was dismissed recently by City Judge Hubert A. Richter after further study of the complaint.

Snyder was arrested on Nov. 19 by Patrolman Frederick Parisi who said he was checking the Sickler's Delivery Service building on O'Neil Street, when he saw two young males running in the darkness. Parisi said he shouted to Snyder to stop one of the pair and the man stepped back as the youth fled.

The juvenile was apprehended by the officer after a chase along Broadway. At arraignment following his arrest, Snyder pleaded innocent.

Two Arrested In Dutchess

TOWN OF POUGHKEEPSIE

Two magazine salesmen who allegedly represented themselves as detectives from Chicago as they stopped at homes in the Manchester Road area seeking subscriptions, were taken into custody Monday following police investigation of complaints from residents.

Police Chief Charles Schade said Wayman Esquillan, 21, of 24 Humbuldt Street, New York City, and Eddie Davis Jr., 22, of 5161 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill., were charged with criminal impersonation of police officers.

Both men were committed to the Dutchess County jail in lieu of $100 bail each pending a hearing in Town Justice's Court.

According to police officials, the two men went to homes and allegedly told residents they were detectives from Chicago and that they were looking for a magazine salesman. They reportedly displayed identification cards that appeared like police ID cards, but were later identified as pistol permits issued in Chicago.

When informed by the resident that no salesman had been seen in the neighborhood, the two accused men allegedly entered homes and tried to obtain subscriptions for magazines, representing themselves as agents for an Indiana firm.

Town police suggested that town residents be alert to any similar activities of door-to-door salesmen, and to notify authorities if any of them call at their homes with sales talks that might be suspected as not being legitimate.

Warning Leaflets Given By British Army Troops

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British Army distributed thousands of leaflets to parents in Northern Ireland's trouble spots today, warning: "If your child plays with a toy gun in the streets he may be killed."

The children are playing a new game called Ambush, the Army said. Youngsters, sometimes only 5 or 6 years old, have pounced on army patrols, blasting away with plastic weapons. One common toy is a replica of a Thompson submachine gun which makes a machine gun-like noise and flashes in the dark.

At least three times during the Christmas holidays children playing Ambush narrowly escaped being fired at by soldiers who thought they were terrorists, the army reported.

"A large 10-year-old can look like a 14-year-old," said Maj. Jim Kellie, "and we have had reports of 14-and 15-year-olds firing the real thing. In the dark or dusk it is extremely difficult for soldiers to distinguish between the real thing and the authentic-looking toy."

Said Capt. Robert Long: "We want parents to realize that soldiers have orders to shoot to kill anyone who aims a gun."

The leaflets, posted on doors and stuck to mailboxes, warn fathers and mothers: "Many of the guns could be confused with the real thing. No soldier wants to shoot a child. This would be tragic for all of us.

"Nevertheless the chances of this happening are very real. Don't let your child play with these weapons."

Boy and Brother Turn in $10,050 Found in Safe

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Harold Kennedy's eight brothers and sisters and unemployed mother could use the $10,050 he and his brother John, 10, found in an abandoned safe in an alley Monday.

"To buy a house and move off Johns Street" in Utica's inner city was what he had in mind, although John thought they might "buy a race track."

Instead, the boys turned over the money to the city police department, which said it is investigating the find and would not disclose the identity of the owner of the safe.

The money was neatly stacked in a manila envelope between two pieces of cardboard, police said, possibly neglected by thieves unwilling—like curious Harold, 11, and John—to pick their way through bank books, stock certificates through bank notes, stock certificates to get to it.

Harold, a fourth-grader said he just shouted "Money!" when they opened the envelope but did not know how much until police counted it.

Draft-Free Three Months Is Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said it may not be necessary to draft anyone for the next three months if the new $3-billion-plus military pay raise generates enough volunteers.

"It is too early to give you a projection for draft calls throughout calendar year 1972 . . . because of the impact of the tremendous pay increases that have been granted," Laird told a news conference Monday.

Congressional orders to trim the Army's strength by more than 70,000 men in the next six months to get it down to 892,000 also will have a bearing on draft calls, the defense chief said.

The prospect of a draft-free first quarter indicates the Nixon administration may be able to fill its military manpower needs in an election year with the smallest draft in more than 20 years.

Although many top military officers doubt he can achieve it, Nixon has said he wants an all-volunteer force by mid-1973.

Small Business Official to Pay Return Visit

KINGSTON

David Offenberg, Small Business Administration loan officer, will return to Kingston Tuesday, Jan. 4, according to an announcement made today by Len Cane, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of Ulster County.

In making the announcement, Cane, said, "The response to Mr. Offenberg's initial visit was so strong the Chamber agreed to set up a second such session."

Offenberg will meet with area businessmen to discuss the possibility of receiving loans, the areas of eligibility, and generally explain the function of the SBA.

He will be in the General Sharpe Room of the Governor Clinton Hotel from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Appointments must be scheduled through the County Chamber, no later than Jan. 3. Appointments will be made on a first come first served basis until all time slots have been alloted.

"It appears now," said Cane, "that we'll be successful in having Dave Offenberg's services once a month. Working in cooperation with other area chambers, we've been able to set the following pattern: Kingston — the first Tuesday of each month; Newburgh — the first Wednesday of each month; Poughkeepsie — the third Tuesday of each month; and Middletown — the third Wednesday."

Cane said it was possible in some instances to set up an appointment in another location if necessary.

During Offenberg's first visit every 15 minute segment of the day was filled. The SBA visits are provided as a free service to the community by the Chamber.

Eat More Drink Less Warns AAA

NEW YORK CITY

The Automobile Club of New York's recipe for holiday parties that end safely for guests who must drive is "Eat, drink, and be merry. But eat more and drink less."

This year's holiday program, aimed at reducing after-party accidents caused by driving under the influence of alcohol, is called "First A Friend . . . Then A Host."

The club feels to tell party goers not to drink if they are driving or to suggest that party givers throw only "dry" parties is unrealistic. But suggesting that both the giver and the goer exercise moderation seems to work.

A holiday host should serve good food and plenty of it throughout the evening, the club advises. Eating before or during the cocktail stage can help keep the concentration of alcohol from building up in the blood stream and keep guests at an even keel.

Guests who drink are advised to limit themselves to one drink an hour, which will enable the system to absorb the alcohol at an even rate.

Hosts are urged to:

— Let guests pace themselves after the first drink. Don't force additional drinks on guests, and don't offer one for the road.

— Have a good selection of non-alcoholic drinks available.

— Begin offering desserts and coffee at least an hour before departure. Coffee is no cure for overindulgence, but when the guests are drinking coffee they aren't taking on more alcohol.

— Tactfully arrange transportation for any guest who has had too much. Have a "safety car", driven by a non-drinker, standing by.

Economic Stabilization Program...
IRS Office Gives Some Answers

POUGHKEEPSIE — This summary of questions and answers on the President's Economic Stabilization Program is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service.

Q. My landlord has just raised my rent, but won't show me any records justifying the increase. Can I refuse to pay?

A. Tenants may refuse to pay added rental charges unless the landlord makes available records showing the base price for the units, and the reason for any increase between the base price and the maximum price he was allowed to charge during the freeze. The IRS has cautioned landlords against raising rents — even within Price Commission guidelines — unless they keep complete records on rental practices and make the records available to tenants whose rents are to be increased.

Q. Do wholesalers have to comply with the base price posting requirements applicable to retailers?

A. No.

Q. Does an employer have to apply to the Internal Revenue Service for permission to make retroactive payments for services performed during the freeze by employes receiving less than $2 per hour straight time or for one-time fringe benefit increases which came due for employes during the freeze?

A. No. In these cases, employers may make retroactive payments on their own determination, subject only to compliance checking by the Internal Revenue Service.

Q. Are state unemployment compensation payments subject to controls in Phase I.

A. State unemployment compensation payments are not wages or prices within the meaning of the governing statute and are not controlled. This is true whether or not a particular state's program is funded in whole or in part by employer contributions.

Q. Do the economic controls apply to college tuition charges?

A. Yes, tutition, as well as room and board are covered.

Q. Do prenotifiers and reporting firms use the same form to notify the Price Commission of price increases?

A. Yes. Form PC-1 (PC-1R for retailers and wholesalers) should be used by both firms with annual sales of $100 million or more to notify the Price Commission in advance of price increases and file quarterly reports and those firms with annual sales between $50-100 million that are merely required to report quarterly. The Price Commission will process requests for price increases only if submitted on those forms or facsimile copies. These forms are available at Internal Revenue Service offices.

All other manufacturing, service and professional firms who do not have to file Form PC-1 to validate their price increases, but must maintain records of such increases in their files may find the form useful for computing and recording in the files any price increases put into effect.

Q. Service charges such as utility, parking meter and bridge tolls were subject to Phase I while licenses and fines such as vehicle licenses and parking tickets were exempt. Does the same situation apply to Phase II?

A. Yes. Unless specifically altered by regulation or published rulings, policy rulings issued by the Cost of Living Council and interpretations issued by the Office of Emergency Preparedness continue to be applicable after Nov. 13, 1971.

Labor Department Has New Office

ALBANY — There is a new Area Office of the U.S. Labor Department's Employment Standards Administration in Albany, under the supervision of area director George M. Hopkins, according to an announcement recently made by Frank B. Mercurio, Regional administrator of the standards group.

The office, located at 41 State Street, Room 106, in Albany, was formally opened Wednesday at 10 a.m., Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-28th) attending.

The office will be responsible for the enforcement over a wide area, including Ulster County, of Federal laws and regulations covering minimum wages, overtime work, child labor, equal pay for men and women, and age discrimination in employment.

Resolutions Listed To Protect Heart

POUGHKEEPSIE — The Dutchess County Heart Chapter has suggested a set of resolutions for everybody to follow to protect their hearts.

The chapter urges everyone to resolve to do the following:

— Eat foods low in saturated fats and cholesterol.

— Control high blood pressure.

— Don't smoke cigarettes.

— Maintain normal weight.

— Exercise moderately and regularly.

The more risks a person has, warns the Heart Association, the greater the chance of suffering a heart attack.

Should heart attack occur, the symptoms may vary, but the usual warning signs are prolonged, heavy pressure or squeezing pain in the center of the chest, behind the breastbone; pain spreading to the shoulder, arm, neck, or jaw; and pain or discomfort often accompanied by sweating, possibly with nausea, vomiting, and shortness of breath.

The decision to obtain help should not be left to the patient alone, but is also the responsibility of his family or friends, the chapter warns.

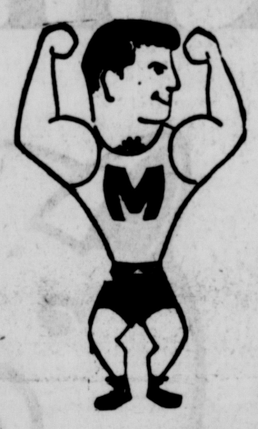

The need to act promptly is urgent, says the Heart Association, since most of the 674,000 annual heart attack deaths occur outside the hospital before the victim receives medical treatment.

State Moose Honor Shannon

KINGSTON — Edward P. Shannon, retired BCI officer with the New York State Police, has been honored by the New York State Moose Association for his work in law enforcement.

Shannon, who now serves as security chief at the State University College at New Paltz, was honored by Kingston Lodge No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose in March as Moose Citizen of the Year.

Albert E. Eisele, civic affairs chairman for Lodge No. 970, told The Freeman that Shannon has been awarded a plaque by the State Moose Association.

'CHILDREN OF GOD' IN COMMUNE

From Irate Parents

'Children of God' Sect Under Fire

HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI)—The "Children Of God" have been forcefully reminded that they are also the sons and daughters of man.

The children, one of the larger sects in the youthful "Jesus Movement," has come under fire recently from the parents of some of its 3,000 disciples living at 40 communes in Europe and North America.

The parents accused the elders of the Fundamentalist Christian faith of using drugs, hypnosis and coercion to "brainwash" young followers into rejecting their families and giving up all their possessions.

In an effort to disprove the charges and counteract resultant bad publicity, the sect's elders sent their followers back home to their parents for the holidays.

"Evangelism is our business and the bad press is hurting our work among young people," explained Bruce Cunningham, the earnest 20-year-old leader of the sect's only commune in the San Francisco Bay area in Hayward.

Cunningham and his wife live with two other married couples and 30 single young men and women in a small three-bedroom home in this suburban community 25 miles southeast of San Francisco.

Inside the single-story, pink stucco and frame house, a dozen disciples explained their belief in the imminent second coming of Christ to newsmen in evangelistic, scripture-studded terms.

The 18-to-28-year-old Fundamentalists, most of them dropouts from the drug culture in San Francisco or Berkeley, appeared neither drugged nor hypnotized. But they willingly obeyed their leaders' instructions to return to their families for the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays as the "Will Of God" despite the sect's belief they must give up their family ties to follow Christ.

This unquestioning following of the sect's leaders, the surrender of all earthly possessions to their commune and the forsaking of their families have produced the strong parental reaction.

On the same day members of the Hayward commune were leaving for home, a young wife 400 miles to the south told the San Diego City Council that it should run the sect out of town because it had "brainwashed" her husband into leaving her and a daughter and giving all his possessions to the group.

Mrs. Mona Eckel said her husband left her when she refused to join one of the two communes in San Diego with him. She instead joined a parents' organization which charges that the sect uses drugs and hypnosis to gain members.

William M. Rambur of Chula Vista, a San Diego suburb, organized a group called "Parents Committee to Free Our Sons and Daughters from the Children Of God" after his 22-year-old daughter, Kay, dropped out of nursing school and joined the sect last summer.

Rambur, a retired naval officer, drove to a Children Of God camp in Texas to see her. "We tried to get her to come home with us, but she told us, 'the devil's in that car with you. I'm not getting into a car with the devil'."

At a confrontation between parents and sect members in Seattle this fall, Kay told newsmen she later had to flee from her father at the Seattle-Tacoma Airport after she failed to convince him she wanted to stay with the Children Of God.

The sect, which has filed a $1 million slander suit against Rambur's group and other similar parent organizations, has charged several times that disciples have been "kidnaped" by their families.

"They can't believe the fantastic work we are doing," said Cunningham, who is known in the sect as 'Rek'm.' "They want a physical explanation for a spiritual happening. These people just don't like our brand of truth."

In the sparsely furnished and spotlessly clean house in Hayward, which the sect rented four months ago after leaving San Francisco, two neatly dressed girls sat face-to-face on wooden chairs, singing hymns as they played guitars.

Singing, guitar playing and rhythmic chanting and reciting of biblical verses make up a good part of the group's communal activities.

The three married couples share two small bedrooms in the house, while a larger bedroom is used as a girls dorm and the living room as a boys dorm where the "Children" throw down their sleeping bags at night.

The other women worked in the kitchen while three men outside repaired a van used to tranport members from one commune to another.

A dozen of the youngsters had just left, sleeping bags on their backs, on a half-mile hike to an interstate freeway where they would start hitchhiking home. A 20-year-old New Jersey girl said she was traveling "on faith" when asked who she would get home.

"It's a journey of faith ... a test," said Maacha, a 19-year-old whose parents sent her plane fare to Los Angeles. "It's a test of our faith in God. I'm really excited. I'm going to take the message to my parents and to my brothers and sisters."

In a news release, sect leaders said they were sending their disciples home to "prove on a vast scale to the whole world that these lies that some have been telling about us are all not true, but totally false and unfounded.

"If they don't come back because they want to stay home, then they should stay home," the leaders said. But they asked parents to "have mercy on your children and not try to prevent them from returning even as we have not prevented them from coming home."

The sect, which has 40 States, Canada, England, Germany, Spain and Denmark—is loosely organize but its disciples travel regularly between colonies in "prophet buses," old vans fixed up with sackcloth and pictures of ecstatic followers.

"Each colony is financially and physically independent," said Cunningham, who repeatedly pulled out a pocket Bible and quoted scripture to back up his points. "New colonies start every week — and some have just disbanded."

He quoted the Gospel of St. Luke and the Acts of the Apostles in the New Testament to explain the sect's demand that its followers forsake all worldly goods and share all things in common.

"We don't live together because we like commune living, but to get the message out," he said.

The message is based on an interpretation of the Bible that holds that the creation of Israel in 1948 signaled that the second coming of Christ was imminent.

Asked when he figured such an event would take place, Cunningham answered: "I'll never be an old man."

Erie Phosphate Law Is Upheld in Court

BUFFALO (AP) — Erie County's law banning the sale and use of phosphate detergents as of Jan. 1 was upheld in State Supreme Court Monday.

Denying Colgate-Palmolive Co. an injunction against enforcement of the statute, Justice Joseph F. Kuszynski ruled there was no evidence to suggest that state lawmakers wanted to overturn the county law when they passed a similar statewide ban that will not take effect until June 1, 1973.

The judge also ruled the county law does not interfere with interstate commerce, as the soap company charged, since it "involves nothing more than the changing of production facilities at the point of origin."

He added "the fact that the other detergent suppliers will be able to comply is indicative of the fact that the burden imposed is not an unreasonable one, but one which can be reasonably met."

The county legislature passed a law last March containing a two-stage restriction on phosphates. The first phase of the law banned as of April 30 detergents containing more than 8.7 per cent phosphate. The second phase, scheduled for the new year, bans phosphate detergents entirely.

Signs in some Buffalo supermarkets Monday warned shoppers their favorite brands may no longer be available because of the law.

Daughter of U.S. Official Is Married

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Laura Claire Wheeler, 19, daughter of a U.S. embassy official from Corning, N.Y., was married here Monday night in probably the last public ceremony in the ambassador's residence here.

Miss Wheeler, whose father, Paul E. Wheeler, is the embassy's cultural affairs officer, married Sidney da Rocha Miranda, 24, a member of a prominent Brazilian banking and business family.

The embassy officially transferred in November to the inland capital of Brasilia, and the palatial residence and tropical park here have been offered for sale for an estimated $2 million. Consular officials said they doubted further ceremonies would be conducted at the residence.

Ambassador William M. Rountre hosted a reception after the wedding for about 300 friends of the families and members of the American enclave here.

Hints From Heloise

By HEOLISE

Keeping Book on your Diet

Dear Heloise:

I have several suggestions for dieters:

Those of us who count calories usually add them up each day. But why not keep track of them in a diary all through your diet?

Use a stenographer's notebook. Then divide each of the two columns and you will have four columns in your diet book.

Use one column for the food and amount (one-half cup, two tablespoons, etc.) and the second column for the number of calories in each amount.

Each meal should be subtotaled and then all totaled at the end of the day.

By keeping a record of each meal you can look back and repeat menus without having to stop to look up the calorie count. Everything is there.

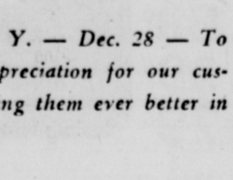

In addition to this information (and in order to make your diet a little more pleasant), I suggest that each day you do something creative and also do a good deed.

This goes in one of the columns. You'll find that when you wake up in the morning with plans for the day, your mind will dwell on that and not so much on food.

It's really fun to look back at that "good list" in your notebook. The possibilities are endless as to what you can do. (Try out a new hair-do; take an extra few minutes with your manicure; read a book, sew, knit, paint; try new low-calorie recipe; take a long walk, etc., etc., etc., and, remember, everywhere you look there are good deeds to be done!)

The fourth column in your diet book should be used for the date, your weight, number of pounds lost to date or any other helpful hints or notes.

"DIETER"

Oh, dear! After all those holiday goodies your timing is perfect.

So many of us are thinking along those lines and the rest of us probably should be.

Ho, ho, ho . . . and a couple of extra Christmas pounds!

Just wish it were as much fun taking 'em off as it was putting 'em on.

But the glow lingers on.

A FAN

Dear Helosie:

It seemed that everytime I turned around this year another ornament would fall off my Christmas tree.

I'm going to fix that once and for all. When I take down the tree this year, I'm going to take liquid glue and apply it it the inside of the little metal cap where the hanger is located.

This will prevent ornaments dropping next year, and, I hope, for years to come.

ANNE

Fantabulous. Just like you.

Dear Heloise:

While sorting important household papers (guarantees, warranties, etc.), I came across an idea for a very inexpensive filing system.

I cut the ends off two large boxes that the new disposable diapers come in. Then I taped them together, and, to make it look a little neater, covered the outside of the boxes with adhesive-backed paper.

This is a handy and orderly file and sits on a shelf in my kitchen cupboard.

Sure saves time in sorting. I made partitions from pieces of cardboard with tabs bearing the headings for different catagories.

Dear Heloise:

When spreading out a sticky dough (such as pizza) with my fingers, I spray my fingers with a spray-on vegetable coating. (It's the kind you use in pots and pans to keep food from sticking and also is used in casseroles.)

It really works.

The Office at Home Is a Way of Life

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

For some people the second office is becoming as important as the second home or second car.

But the business man may not feel the need for an office in the home until his wife's recipe for egg foo young turns up in the top-secret report he submits to the chairman of the board.

For many small business people — plumbers, electricians, farmers—the office in the home is a way of life. Nowadays teachers and even housewives are burdened with all sorts of papers that require space for ready reference.

Housewives with traveling husbands have had to take over much of the high finance at home, learning about interest rates on charge accounts, capital gains taxes, and so on. And there are all those family social security numbers to be kept on tap—the youngest working member of the family might have one. The office at home is a good place too, to keep a record of monies expended for home improvements that may be needed for income tax purposes when the house is sold. Other items that should be earmarked for the home office are family records—school diplomas, Medical histories, and so on.

A small office can be organized in very little space. It may be a little room that is expendable, and if it is a necessary convenience, it may even be a tax deduction.

One family turned a seldom-used pantry into a little office, but another family might find space in the utility room. A basement area may be useful for such a purpose. It may require framing for warmth and privacy. Your building supply store can help you estimate the cost of lumber when you give them the dimensions. One man framed in an area, six by eight, for less than $100. If the area is windowless, a good fluorescent light can provide desk light.

If no space is available for a little office, perhaps a portion of a room may be used as a niche for a desk. A short wall? The corner of a good-sized room? A folding screen can hide the work area.

Many manufacturers are producing the old-fashioned roll top desk with its little crannies for storing papers and records. One imported folding "home office" employs a concept that originated in America, observes Anthony Clarkson, president of Greatwood Products, whose line of cabinet furnishings and desks has led him to research the paper explosion in the home and the trends in desks.

Two of the large American antiques of Gothic design are in the Smithsonian Institution, he points out. The newer desk is built in a compact manner to accommodate smaller space but it has the departmentalization required for papers and records—pullout and adjustable storage shelves, vertical and horizontal files, glide-away writing desk, goose-neck lamp that swings out from a shelf within its width of 34 inches and depth of 21 inches. Added use is provided by building crannies into the doors which swing out to a width of five feet.

"The average person is becoming a minor accountant. Seventy-five per cent of those who buy a self-contained home office use it for nothing but papers that are generated around the house," he explained.

The executive believes working at home can be less harassing for the businessman if he uses company disciplines with scheduled work hours and consistent work patterns. The home should not resemble an extension of one's company. If one is forced to work at home the work should be arranged neatly and compactly. And it should be kept out of sight.

He also advises:

When setting up functional space, do not violate the decor. Do not put it where family pursuits and noise may be nuisances.

Equip yourself with the right tools—pads, pencils, calculator, dictionary, typewriter and reference works—and keep them at your desk.

A business man might ease the strain and inconvenience of lugging large catalogs and books from his office, if he gets duplicates of them to be left at home.

Doing the Right Thing

By Elizabeth L. Post

(© 1971, Emily Post Institute, Inc.)

DEAR MRS. POST: May lovers kiss or demonstrate affection within friendly circles at home parties? I know that it is wrong in public places. I would very much appreciate your opinion on this.

Pam

Dear Pam: Young people today seem to think nothing of caressing, kissing, etc., in public. Their theory, and it is quite true, is that love and affection are natural emotions, and nothing to be ashamed of. Therefore, why should they hide outward demonstrations of their feelings?

Up to a point, I agree. But I believe that such gestures are much more meaningful if they are private—between the two people who are in love. They should be their own and not just something that can be shared by anyone who happens to be around.

Naturally, this is not as true when you are among family and friends, who, to some extent, share in your feelings. Displays of affection, as long as they are not of too intimate a nature, are therefore accepted — and acceptable — in "friendly circles."

• • •

DEAR MRS. POST: When eating dinner in a restaurant and the bill totals $15.00 plus tax of $1.05, should the tip be figured 20 per cent of the net $15.00 or $16.05 gross with tax?

Paul

Dear Paul: Theoretically, one should only leave a tip based on the total before tax, since that is the only part in which the service is involved. In practice, most people simply take the total as it is given to them by the waiter — tax included — and base their tip on that amount. One should not be criticized, however, for deducting the tax.

Incidentally, you mention "20 per cent of the net." In most cases, 15 per cent is still considered ample tip—especially if you base your tip on the total sum.

• • •

Whom do you tip? When, and how much? You will find the answers to these questions in my booklet "The Etiquette of Tipping." To get a copy, send thirty-five cents in coins to cover booklet and mailing expenses, to Elizabeth L. Post, in care of this newspaper.

What Are You Doing New Year's Eve?... Why Not Get to Know Your Neighbors

What are you doing New Year's Eve?

How often during the holidays is this question asked? And how often are you put on the spot and risk being drawn into commitments to attend a dull get-together when you can't come up with a quick answer like, "We're taking this fabulous cruise on the Erie Canal!"

Violet Hackim, an F. W. Woodworth expert on home and family trends in the nation, cites statistics that show that in reality most Americans don't really do much of anything on New Year's Eve. Despite television's view of New York's Times Square at the stroke of midnight, followed by Guy Lombardo playing to a packed ballroom at the Waldorf Astoria, most of us spend the evening quietly with the family. "Outside of our very large cities, Americans are basically homebodies," Miss Hackim says.

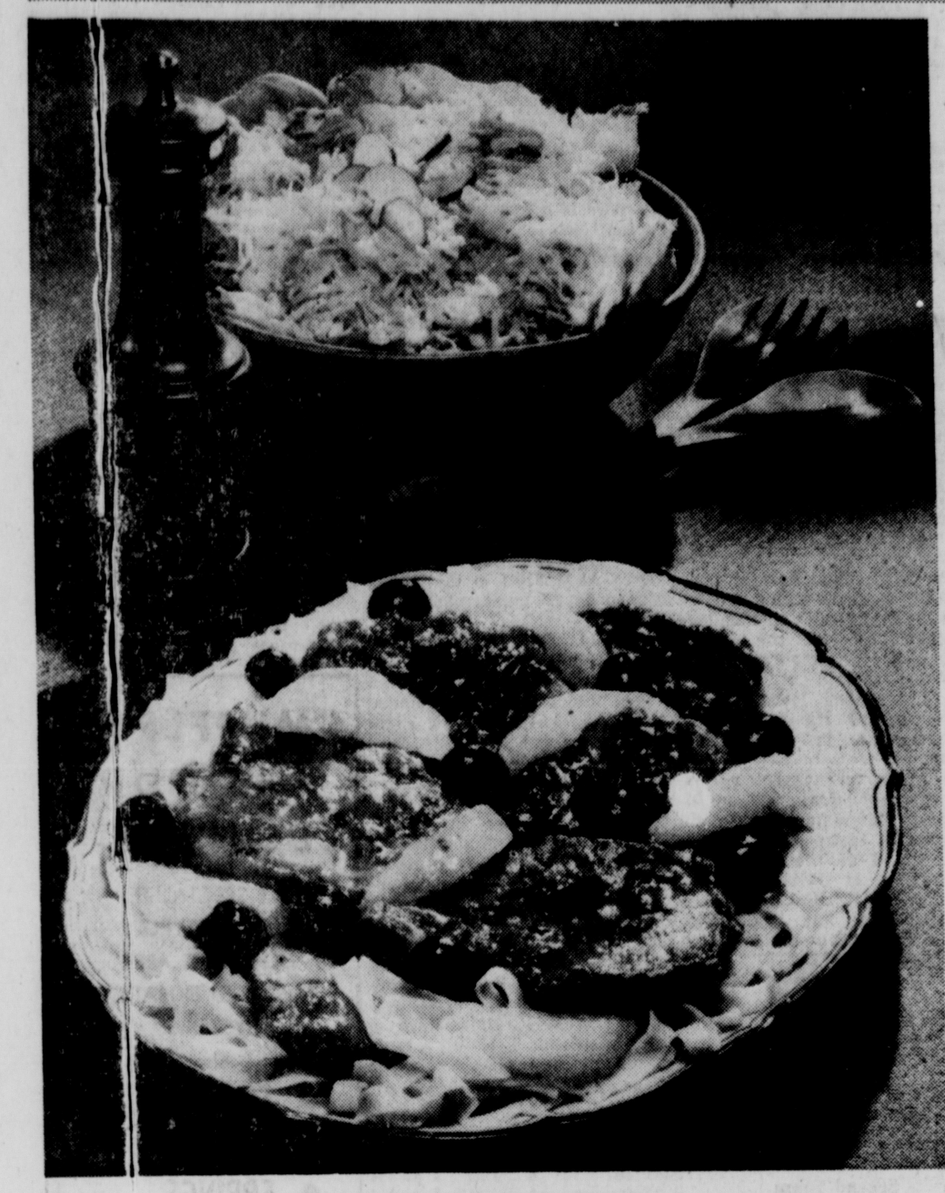

According to Miss Hackim, New Year's Eve could be a perfect time to have the neighbors over, and in a warm and informal manner that doesn't denote any formal party. "Most likely they haven't planned anything, but, assuming you have, are just relaxing at home."

The adviser also notes, "We live in such a transitory society today that while we like to think of our neighborly existence, in reality we really don't know the folks next door. Of course, wives speak at the market, and husbands say hello at the bus or train stop in the morning, but it's actually the kids who are maintaining the neighborhood concept today. They attend school together and play together in the afternoons while the grownups know each other only on a casual basis."

Miss Hackim suggests, "Don't really plan anything—remember they might have the same idea about inviting the folks over from the other side—but instead just after dinner call them up and in a friendly, informal manner suggest that if they have no plans for the evening why not drop over later and join you around the fireplace in welcoming in the New Year."

Because it's the holiday season you usually have a good supply of refreshments on hand, or why not use those boxes of pizza mix sitting around for unexpected occasions? Speaking from experience, Miss Hackim says, "You'll be surprised how delighted the neighbors are that you thought of them on New Year's Eve, and they gladly accept the invitation. It means they don't have to dress up, and they know they won't be out all night in a large group where everyone is trying so desperately to have a good time."

And, most important, everyone gets to know each other. Not just as the Browns and the Joneses, but more on the basis of Kate and Jenny and Bill and Frank. What could be a better way of starting off the New Year than by knowing your neighbors on a first-name basis?

BUTTERFLIED PORK CHOPS

Tired of Turkey?... Try Chops and Ripe Olives

When the juicy fresh taste of orange combines with the nut - like flavor of the California ripe olive in saucing pork chops, it's for real good eating. It's for eye appeal, too, with butterflied chops.

To butterfly the chops is simple but if your prefer, ask your meat man to do it for you. Brown the chops and combine with the orange, ripe olives and other ingredients including an accent with oregano. Cook gently until chops are fork tender and you really do have a dish. The sauced chops are flavor complimented with buttered caraway noodles and sliced tomatoes.

California ripe olives are great as a snack and as an ingredient. They are comparatively low in calories — one large ripe olive is only six calories. Ripe olives are also low in carbohydrates so if you watch your weight, you can still enjoy ripe olives. Available in nine different sizes as, pitted or unpitted, they are also canned sliced and chopped. Choose the right size and style for the purpose and then enjoy.

Butterflied Pork Chops With Olives

Six loin pork chops, One and one-fourth inches thick
Three-fourths teaspoon salt
Two tablespoons salad oil
One cup chopped onion
Three-fourths cup beef broth
Three-fourths cup orange juice
One-half teaspoon oregano
One cup canned pitted California ripe olives
One and one-half tablespoons cornstarch
Two tablespoons cold water
One cup orange sections

Cut around bones of chops, removing meat in one piece. Trim off most of fat, leaving only a very thin edge. Starting on fat side, cut through chops toward edge from which bone was removed, leaving a "hinge" so meat opens out twice as wide as the purchased chop. Sprinkle chops with one-fourth teaspoon salt. Heat oil in skillet and brown chops on both sides. Remove chops; add onion to skillet, and brown lightly. Add broth, orange juice, oregano and remaining one-half teaspoon salt, and heat to boiling. Return chops to skillet. Add ripe olives. Cover tightly, and cook over very low heat until chops are tender, about one hour. Stir cornstarch into cold water. Remove chops to heated serving dish. Stir cornstarch mixture into liquid remaining in skillet. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce boils and thickens. Add orange sections, and heat one minute. Spoon mixture over chops. Serve with buttered caraway noodles. Makes six servings.

Craving for Salt Could Mean 'Get a Checkup'

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

(© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who was annoyed with her gentleman friend because he always salted his food before even tasting it, reminded me of something I once read about Thomas Edison.

Edison would always invite a prospective employe over for dinner. The first course would be soup, and if the fellow salted his soup without tasting it first, Edison wouldn't hire him.

JOE GOLDSTEIN, SIOUX CITY, IA.

DEAR JOE: Heaven only knows how many good men Edison passed up by prejudging a man because he prejudged the soup.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to read about George who always seasons his food with plenty of salt and pepper before even tasting it, because I do the same thing.

I have been criticized often for this, but, Abby, I don't just "guess" that the food will need more salt. I KNOW it will.

You see, I am one of those people who can't taste any seasoning unless there is a whole lot of it. And if the food had as much salt in it as I liked, nobody else would be able to eat it.

I just happen to like a lot of salt. Now, I take a token taste first, and then pour on the salt to suit myself. That way I keep everybody happy.

PASS THE SALT

DEAR PASS: I don't want to alarm you, but I am told that a craving for salt is nature's way of telling you that you need to have a thoro physical checkup.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: We are parents of a child who is not doing well at school. We think we might be part of the problem and have been considering speaking with the school psychologist.

A neighbor told us that the school principal would insist on sitting in on all the conferences, and the psychologist could not keep confidential any personal, family problems that might come out during these conferences. Private help is out of the question right now, as we cannot afford it. Any suggestions?

SUBURBANITES

DEAR SUBURBANITES: Go to school and get your information directly from the school psychologist. I can't believe what your neighbor told you is true.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is for the person who never misses a chance to brag about his ancestors. If he goes back to his great-great-grandfather, ask him what he knows about the other seven. Then remind him that there is as much in his blood from each of these 15 people as there is from the one he boasts of; not more than seven per cent of his heritage can be from any one of them.

If he is so foolish as to go back to his great-great-great there are 32 people involved, and if he goes back to the Mayflower, if that lineup didn't include some bums, prostitutes or horse thieves, his case would be the exception.

"Honor thy father and thy mother." But it's risky to go very far beyond them.

Traveling Lunchbox

To end the monotony of sandwich making every morning and provide your family with more nutritious lunches, prepare foods ahead and freeze them, says Louis K. Breitung, Extension Home Economist. A variety of hearty sandwiches, cookies, cup cakes, wedges of cake or pie, or individual cartons of fruit may be sorted in your freezer. Husband and children select their choice for the special lunch box section of the freezer and foods will be properly thawed by noon. Here are a few suggestions for most tasty lunches:

Use a variety of breads such as white, whole wheat, Boston Brown bread, and nut bread. Spread both slices generously with soft butter or margarine to protect bread from moisture in the filling.

Fillings such as roast beef, tuna, salmon, sliced cheese, cheese spreads, chopped olives, and peanut butter freeze satisfactorily. Mix or spread with chili sauce, catsup, fruit juice, mayonnaise or salad dressing, if desired.

Moisture - vapor - proof wrapping should be used if sandwiches are to be stored longer than four days. For shorter periods, heavy waxed paper will do. handy plastic freezer bag or plastic containers are ideal for storing sandwiches.

When freezing quantities of fruits for future meals, freeze some in individual servings for lunch box use. In addition, include such food as applesauce, baked apples, and stewed fruits.

Freeze soup in ice cube trays (usually quick — release trays so they can be removed without melting). Store in plastic bags; use three or four cubes per serving.

Handy for lunch box meals. Idea: For a child's lunch tie string to one end of weiner, place in thermos bottle and fill with hot soup.

Wrap cookies such as brownies, chocolate chip, peanut butter, sugar, and fruit in individual servings.

Raw foods from the refrigerator — carrot and celery strips, green onions, radishes, a small tomato — will make a box lunch more appetizing and these foods remain cool and crisp until noon in the box with the frozen foods.

Handy plastic containers are available for freezing individual portions; also wedge-shaped containers for pie.

Keep your lunch box foods orderly in the freezer by packing similar foods together in one box. This makes it easier and quicker for the family to make selections.

Mashed Potatoes in Fancy Dress

Classic mashed potatoes are an all-time favorite in most American homes. But for a change of pace, there are many ways to vary the basic mashed-potato theme. However they arrive at the table, make sure you use Idaho potatoes, whether fresh or frozen. The Idaho potato is, of course, the great American potato . . . it offers incomparable flavor and wonderfully fluffy texture. Try these flavorful fancy-dress mashed-potato versions:

Cook a halved onion with potatoes, remove when draining.

Cook sliced carrots with pared potatoes, mash together with butter and cream.

Eliminate milk and substitute dairy sour cream.

Add a few drops of Tabasco pepper sauce.

Before serving fold in chopped chives, parsley or watercress or slightly cooked shredded carrots and Cheddar cheese shreds.

Garnish with hot butter-toasted slivered almonds or grated Parmesan cheese.

OCS, Germantown Take Coleman Openers

By STEVE KANE

Coleman's Christmas Tournament kicked off with a bang Monday night with Ron Pape's Onteora Indians making all the noise by thrashing St. Patrick's 81-45, and ended with a whimper as the Statesmen succumbed to Germantown 79-75.

Featuring one of the tallest basketball players in the area in 6-9 Jim Benton, Germantown overcame a 40-27 Coleman halftime lead to win the nightcap thriller. The Clippers came out of the dressing room and went into a man-to-man press Coleman just couldn't seem to handle.

"It was like our first game of the season," lamented coach Bill Dubois, whose squad got a taste of their own medicine. "We knew they were going to press us but we put the ball on the floor anyway.

Coleman had run their lead to 14 points as the third period began when the fireworks started to happen. Benton ineffective in the first half, made a foul shot then followed up the rebound on the second attempt and made it good. Clippers Bob Frank and John Westervelt jumped in with steals and each made a layup, and Germantown had seven points in eleven seconds.

From that point the tone of the game began to change. Coleman went a little cold, and Benton and Steve Pratt started to hit and whittle down the Statesmen's lead.

With 4:46 left, Pratt made it 65-64 with a foul shot as Coleman's Mark Weber left on fouls. Seconds later Germantown's Bob Frank drew his fifth to even the ledgers, but the Clippers were relentless and tied it on a Pratt jumper 71-all at the 2:38 mark.

"They put the pressure on us and we just folded," said DuBois. In the last two minutes Coleman's John Geuss, Mike Eigo and Ed Mathieu all fouled out.

Pratt's first of two put Germantown in front 72-71 for the first time since the four minute mark in the first quarter.

Kevin Matthews tied it up again for Coleman, but Pratt, who finished with 27 points, hit another free throw and Bob Moore twisted one through for a three-point edge.

After a Coleman time out, Phil Palladino, Coleman's high scorer with 24 points, bounced one off the rim and Moore drew a foul on the rebound. He converted the one-and-one to put the game out of the Statesmen's reach.

"We've played our previous games like we played that first half tonight," commented Clipper coach Dave Young. "I didn't scream at them in the locker room at the half, I just said we'd been invited here to play ball and that was the least we could do."

Benton's second half play was a big reason for the Clipper win. The center had 23 points, nine on foul shots. The agressiveness of Westervelt and Moore was also instrumental in turning the tide.

But the Statesmen also helped beat themselves. "This was one game we should not have lost," said DuBois. "We've been beaten before, but tonight we made mistakes—we let the press get to us, we clogged up the backcourt and we couldn't put the ball in the hoop."

Things should be different for the Hurley Avenue quintet tonight, however, as St. Patricks, now winless in seven starts provides the opposition. The Emerald Knights were no match for the Indians in the opener.

Brian Byrne took the opening tipoff in for a score, and a minute later sunk a corner shot, but those were only two times in the game St. Patrick's was to see the lead in their possession.

Onteora's Dan Brown, Bob Zoehfeld and Mike Ricciardella led a barrage that gave the Indians a ten-point first period lead, and the team from Boiceville was never headed. Brown led all scorers with 19 points.

Zoehfeld hit for 13 and rebounded strongly for Onteora, and Bruce Hurley came off the bench to fire in 14 markers in the Indian's balanced assault.

St. Patricks, in the midst of an "atrocious" season, according to coach Norm Finch, was further hampered by having only an eight man roster. Four players were recently suspended from the team.

The Catskill contingent did get a good performance from Byrne (18 points) and some good defensive plays were turned in by Bernie Skelly.

Onteora was just too deep, though, running up a 41-19 halftime lead and never stopping. Tonight the Indians will have a little more of a struggle against Germantown.

Second-Ranked Marquette Rude Host

By BOB DI PIETRO
UPI Sports Writer

Marquette isn't interested in being a gracious host. It's interested in being a winning one.

The second-ranked Warriors, the highest-rated team in action in the 11 holiday-week tournaments being played Monday, romped to an 88-44 win over Georgetown in the opening round of the 10th annual Milwaukee Classic, of which they are the host team.

It was the seventh straight win for unbeaten Marquette, which managed the easy victory despite playing reserves who shot only 20 per cent in the first half.

The Warrior regulars came out steaming in the second half, however, and opened up a 56-28 lead with 13:38 left in the game. Four of the six points scored by the hapless Hoyas early in the second half were goaltending calls against Jim Chones.

Chones led all scorers with 17 points and George Frazier added 16 for the Warriors, who met Marshall tonight in the finals. Marshall gained the finals with an 85-83 victory over Wisconsin on a 25-foot jump shot by Mike D'Antoni in the final five seconds of the game.

Tom Riker, Kevin Joyce and Danny Taylor combined for 62 points as third-rated South Carolina (6-0) rolled to an 87-69 victory over Fairfield in the opening round of the Eastern College Athletic Conference Quaker City tournament at the Palestra in Philadelphia.

In the opening Quaker contest, Lloyd Richardson and Len Kosmalski scored 22 points apiece as Tennessee outlasted Manhattan 76-70 before Boston College squeezed by LaSalle 62-61 and Villanova discouraged Massachusetts 100-83 in night contests.

Villanova meets Tennessee and Boston College faces South Carolina in today's semi-finals.

Florida State (8-2) stiffened its defense over the last five minutes to turn back a Washington team that had chipped eight points from a 10-point halftime deficit as the 17th-ranked Seminoles downed the Huskies 85-77 in the opening game of the 16th annual Far West Classic. Defending tournament champion Oregon State, with all five starters in double figures, breezed past previously undefeated Dartmouth 106-72 in the nightcap.

All-America candidate Jim Price netted 26 points to lead No. 13 Louisville (6-1) to a 103-81 rout of Syracuse in the featured opening round game of the 20th annual ECAC Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden in New York. In other Festival action, Fordham used a fullcourt press to upend Utah 74-67, previously winless St. Peter's upset Duke 77-74 and Providence eased by Penn St. 81-65.

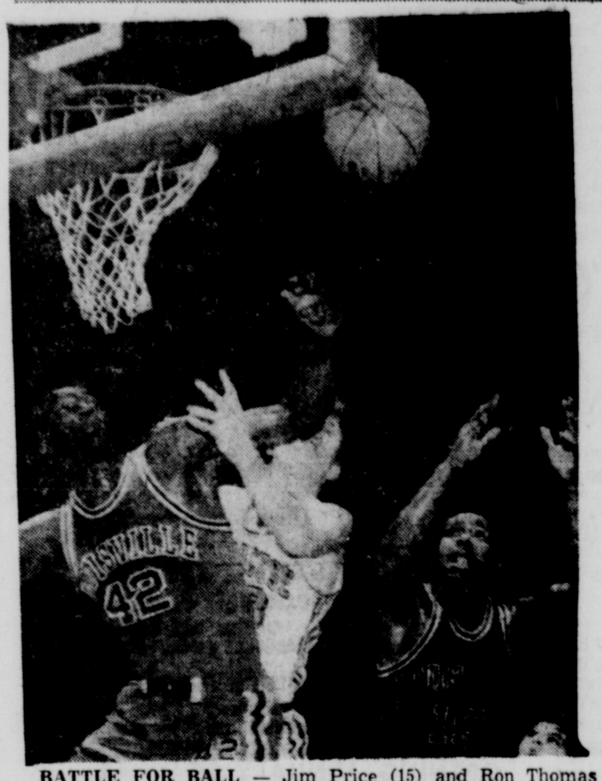

The 20th-ranked Arizona State Sun Devils (6-2) outhustled the Hawaii Marines, a non-college opponent, 109-88, in the opening game of the eighth annual Rainbow Classic at Honolulu. The 12th-ranked Hawaii Rainbows edged Northwestern 85-83 in overtime in the second game.

In other tournament action, Army stopped Indiana State 83-75 and Oklahoma City fought off North Texas 85-79 in the first round of the All-College tournament at Oklahoma City; Stanford beat Bowling Green (Ohio) 90-82 and Valparaiso (Ind.) squeezed by Detroit 57-56 in the Motor City tournament at Detroit; Loyola (Chicago) downed Southern Methodist 102-78 and St. Louis University blasted Yale 95-70 in the St. Louis Invitational; Houston whipped Louisiana State 100-66 and Michigan State edged Texas A&M 67-65 in the Astro-Bluebonnet tournament at Houston.

Sophomore Lee Haven scored 18 points to pace Colorado to an 83-62 conquest of Oklahoma State and Missouri upended Nebraska 76-64 in the Big Eight tournament at Kansas City, Mo.; Wyoming lassoed Idaho State 93-84 and Utah State earned a narrow 95-94 victory in overtime over Arkansas in the Big Blue Classic at Logan, Utah.

Monmouth College squeaked by Hartwick 78-75 and Montclair State, a three-time winner of the event, outlasted Dickinson 88-70 in the New Jersey K'wanis Classic at Upper Montclair, N.J.; Eastern Michigan pulled out a 97-95 win against West Virginia State in the Ashland (Ohio) tournament; James Lister's 39 points led Sam Houston State to a 101-96 victory in double overtime against Western New Mexico and Bethel (Tenn.) downed Western Carolina 74-65 in the Quincy (Ill.) tournament.

Robert McAdoo, a junior college transfer, flipped in 28 points to lead No. 4 North Carolina (6-1) to a 96-78 victory over Harvard in a non-tournament game.

BATTLE FOR BALL — Jim Price (15) and Ron Thomas (42) of Louisville battle Tom Stundis (rear) of Syracuse for loose ball during their ECAC Holiday Festival Basketball Tournament in Madison Square Garden Monday. All-America candidate Price paced a balanced scoring attack with 26 points to lead Louisville to a 103-81 rout of Syracuse. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Six Dolphins on All-AFC

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Miami Dolphins certainly have come of age in a hurry.

The Dolphins, who did not have a single player named to the United Press International's American Football Conference All-Star team a year ago, have placed six men on the 1971 squad.

Coach Don Shula's club, which captured the AFC's Eastern Division title with a 10-3-1 record, had four players selected to the offensive squad and two named to the defensive unit in a balloting conducted of 33 sports writers who cover the AFC on a regular basis. At least two writers from each AFC city participated in the voting.

Those named to the offensive unit from the Dolphins were quarterback Bob Griese, the AFC's leading passer; wide receiver Paul Warfield; guard Larry Little and running back Larry Csonka. Selected to the defensive team were end Bill Stanfill and safety Jake Scott.

Chiefs are Next

The Kansas City Chiefs, winners of the Western Division title, were next with five players named to the All-Star unit. The Chiefs placed wide receiver Otis Taylor and tackle Jim Tyrer on the offensive unit and middle linebacker Willie Lanier, linebacker Bobby Bell and cornerback Jim Marsalis on the defensive squad. Tyrer, Lanier, Bell and Marsalis are all repeaters from last year's team, and it marks the seventh successive year that Bell has been selected to the All-Star team.

Baltimore, runnerup to Miami in the Eastern Division, had three players selected to the first team while Houston, New York, Oakland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Denver, Cleveland and San Diego each had one player named.

The Colts placed center Bill Curry on the offensive team and linebacker Ted Hendricks and end Bubba Smith on the defensive squad. Smith is a repeater from last year's team while Curry's selection at center ends a 10-year dominance at that position by Oakland's Jim Otto.

Rounding out the offensive unit are tackle Winston Hill of New York, guard Walt Sweeney of San Diego, running back Floyd Little of Denver and tight end Milt Morin of Cleveland. Hill is a repeater from last year while Little was named for the third straight year.

The defensive squad is complemented by tackles Joe Greene of Pittsburgh and Mike Reid of Cincinnati, cornerback Willie Brown of Oakland and safety Ken Houston of Houston. Greene and Brown also made the team last year, with Brown now having been named for four consecutive years and five times overall.

Second Team

The second team is dominated by the Chiefs and the Colts, each with five selectees. Kansas City placed guard Ed Budde and quarterback Len Dawson on the offensive unit and tackle Buck Buchanan, end Aaron Brown and cornerback Emmitt Thomas on the defensive squad.

Baltimore named running back Norm Bulaich and tackle Bob Vogel to the offensive team and middle linebacker Mike Curtis and safeties Rick Volk and Jerry Logan to the defensive unit.

Oakland placed four players on the second team, New York, Miami and Houston two each and Cleveland and San Diego one apiece.

Selected from the Raiders were wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff, tackle Bob Brown, guard Gene Upshaw and tight end Ray Chester.

Highland Rips Wallkill

92-53 Romp In Tourney

NEW PALTZ

Host school New Paltz had too many strikes against them and bowed to Marlboro in overtime Monday night, 60-57, and Tom Rozzi pumped in 19 points to lead Highland over Wallkill 92-53 in the Huguenot's Christmas Tournament.

Starters Mike Fairweather and Bruce Keeping were unavailable for action when the Hugies took the court against the Dukes, but the home team almost pulled it out of the fire. Trailing 30-22 at the half, Frank Davis' men crept back into the game in the third period and started the fourth quarter only one point behind.

Strike three came with about two minutes left in the contest as a third starter, Jay Ackert, tore ligaments in his ankle and had to leave the game. But the Hugies weren't quite ready to throw in the towel. Ed Siani hit his lone bucket of the night to knot it at 51-all.

"We had the opportunities to win it right there," said Davis. "There was time left and we got the ball, but we missed a couple of easy shots about ten or 15 feet and went into overtime."

The Dukes got nine points in the extra period to New Paltz' six, and that was the story. George Salinovich earned game honors with 19 points for the Dukes, and Lew Rhoades added 10.

The first contest of the evening was anything but. The Big Blue were too much for the Panthers to contend with and the score showed it. Jim Meredith notched 20 points for Wallkill, but his individual honors couldn't match five Highlanders in double figures. Besides Rozzi, Ron Monroe had 13, Perry Monroe and John Barrington 11 each and Tom Watson hit for 10.

Highland dominated the boards, and the smaller Wallkill team could only manage 20 field goals.

Wednesday night New Paltz will meet Highland and Marlboro faces Wallkill. The tournament is structured so that teams, though all members of the UCAL, will only play opponents outside their division, regardless of first game results. The games do not count in league standings.

Toledo Seeks 35th

By United Press International

Toledo University goes gunning for its third consecutive Tangerine Bowl victory—and its 35th consecutive win—when it faces Southern Conference champion Richmond tonight in the 25th annual classic at the 15,000 seat Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

Kickoff time is 8:00 p.m. EST.

The 34th annual Blue-Gray game also gets under way at 8:00 p.m. at Montgomery, Ala., with the Gray squad seeking to stretch the South's win streak to four in a row.

Sixth-ranked Arizona State outscrambled Florida State, 45-38, Monday before 51,089 watching the first annual Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz.

South Edges North

Tommy Durrance of Florida plunged over from the one-yard line with 6:59 left in the game and Tennessee's Bobby Majors added the extra point to help defeat his coaching brother, Johnny, as the South edged the North, 7-6, Monday night in the 24th North-South Shrine College All-Star game before 18,640 at Miami's Orange Bowl.

Halfback Woody Green scored his third touchdown of the game—a two-yard plunge that capped a 58-yard drive—with 34 seconds left to play to give the Sun Devils their sixth and winning touchdown in the wild-scoring Fiesta Bowl. Green had scored earlier on one and two-yard plunges.

Gary Huff, the nation's total offense leader during the regular season, connected on 25 of 46 pass attempts for 347 yards and touchdowns of 10 and 24 yards to favorite target Rhett Dawson to spark the 19th-ranked Seminoles.

Huff, voted the most valuable player of the game on offense, drew the praise of Arizona State's Junior Ah You, a defensive end awarded the best lineman trophy.

"We had him on his back a lot of times after throwing," Ah You said of Huff. "But he just came back and kept completing them."

Win Skein Snapped

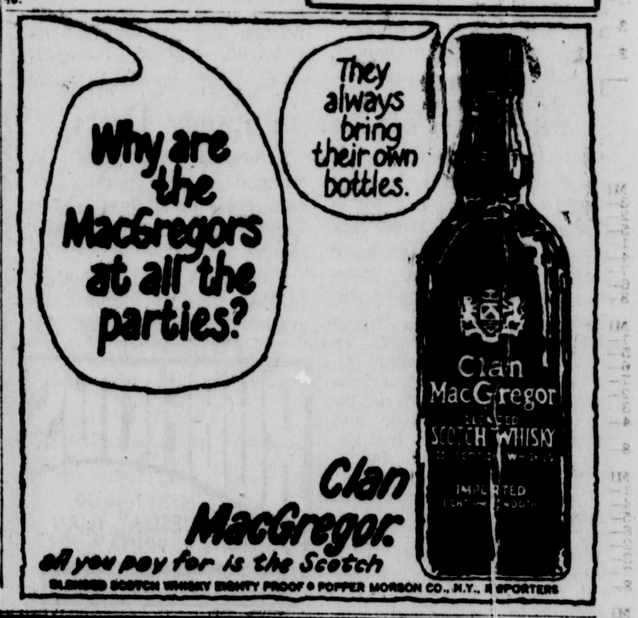

The South victory snapped a win skein of four for the North in the Shrine contest.

The North scored first when Northwestern's Maury Daigneau found Iowa State's Bob Richardson with a one-yard flip on fourth down in the second quarter. Ernie Jackson of Duke blocked the conversion attempt.

But the South, bottled up throughout most of a ragged contest that produced nine turnovers, three fumbles and six interceptions, finally launched the game-tying drive. Then Majors made his accurate conversion.

Bobby's older brother, Johnny, who also played for Tennessee and was coach of the North squad, commented prior to the game, "I haven't lost any sleep over it (he and Bobby being on opposite sides) and I'm sure Bobby hasn't either, but it should be real interesting."

It was.

KHS in Oneonta Tourney

KINGSTON

Kingston High School's varsity basketball team will be looking to go over the .500 mark and the junior varsity will try t extend its undefeated streak when they both travel to Oneonta Wednesday for the host team's holiday tournament.

Kingston is pitted against New Hartford in opening round action while Bluebridge, Pa. will meet Oneonta. The pairings are identical for the varsity and JV's, the former playing at night and the latter in the afternoon.

The winners will meet Thursday for the championship, while the losers play in the consolation bracket.

Kingston's varsity is 3-3 on the season, the victories coming in their last three outings since center Tony Adams has rejoined the club from the injured list.

Coach Mike Rienzo will go with Adams, forwards Tom Turco and Chuck Jackson, and guards Walt Houghtaling and Ronnie Burris at the start against New Hartford.

Turco is leading the team in scoring with 79 points in six games, but Adams has the high average of 16.3 for three contests.

The Maroons have been bolstered of late by the emergence of Houghtaling. The junior guard missed the opener due to an injured shoulder and was relatively ineffective in his first two games back. But Houghtaling has hit for 15 and 19 in his last two outings.

Little is known about Kingston's first round opponent other than that if tournament arrangers worked according to form New Hartford should be tough.

Normally the home team is paired against a weak squad so that its trip to the finals won't be too difficult. This leaves two of the better teams to meet each other in the first round.

Kingston's junior varsity has won all six of its games. The little Maroons are a big, fast outfit led by guard Raymond Gay.

The varsity scoring totals:

OTB Television Again Affirmed

MONTICELLO

Monticello Raceway President and General Manager Leon Greenberg today was notified that the Appellate Division of the Third Judicial Department unanimously had affirmed the opinion of Justice A. Franklin Mahoney of the Supreme Court, whose 12-page decision previously had vacated the New York State Harness Racing Commission restrictions on television in conjunction with off-track betting.

"This is a landmark decision which opens many new vistas and will do as much for harness racing as it has done for professional football, tennis, golf, hockey, and basketball, etc." declared Greenberg.

"Most significant part of this decision is that it was unanimous," Greenberg went on.

"In language of the layman, this means the 12-page decision previously handed down by Justice Mahoney is the law in this state and that the attorney general does not have the right, in behalf of the State Harness Commission, to appeal to the Court of Appeals as a matter of course but must make application for permission to appeal.

"Any such application for appeal would be vigorously opposed by us since there aren't any constitutional questions involved," Greenberg concluded.

Races Fog-Bound

In Rain and Fog, Connie Oregon posted her second successive Monticello Raceway winter meet victory Monday night, trotting to a two length margin over Durbar and Bold Friday during the evening's feature. Driven by Steven Warrington, the seven-year-old mare made it to the top approaching the half-mile mark and held off all comers. She covered the mile in 2:13.3 to return $8.40, $4.20 and $3.00.

The unseasonable wet weather slicked the racing surface, and fog drifted in and out often making observation of the races difficult.

An accident in the third race unseated three drivers around the first turn. It was touched off when Adioscope, driven by Robert Del Camp, "chocked down" and toppled over the infield rail. But before he did, Silvery Waves and Add Frisco were sent into an interference break that unseated their pilots, Thomas Luchento and Ed Gomaras. None appeared worse for the wear when they were checked by a doctor. Meanwhile, Space Age driven by Ralph Anderson won the race with Volo Time second. Third Alarm coming third. The 3-4 perfecta returned $87.00.

The Superfecta race was encased in fog, but winner Miss Roma Jac driven by Mike Gagliardi returned $19.40 on the front end and set up a $1,057.50 payoff. The second horse was Spinoza, followed by Mighty Winston and Boby T. Gladiator. Winning combo was 8-2-1-4. There were 103 on track winning superbet tickets and another 90 amongst OTB patrons.

New OTB Handle

Another OTB handle record on trotters was established Monday night when off-track betting in New York City on Monticello Raceway's card topped $700,000 for the first time. The record of $704,068 included a near-record handle in the superfecta race of $290,167.

The previous OTB handle high-mark was $696,566 on Wednesday, December 22nd. Record superfecta race betting is $294,270 reached on December 20th.

Celts' Lead Up to Two

By United Press International

The Boston Celtics have opened up a two-game lead in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division thanks to John Havlicek's clutch touch.

Always at his best under pressure, Havlicek scored two field goals in the last 16 seconds Monday night to rally the Celtics to a 99-97 triumph over the Golden State Warriors. The victory was the Celtics' eighth in a row and gave them a 25-12 record compared to the idle New York Knicks' 22-13 mark.

Nate Thurmond's field goal put the Warriors ahead, 97-95, with 30 seconds left but Havlicek tied the score with a short jumper with 16 seconds to go. The Celtics got back the ball after an errant shot by Cazzie Russell with one second on the clock and called a time out. With time back in, Don Nelsen passed in to Havlicek, who connected for the game-winning jumper from the side.

Havlicek had 28 points and Jo Jo White 27 for the Celtics while Thurmond had 28 and Russell 25 for the Warriors.

The Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Buffalo Braves, 121-112, and the Atlanta Hawks beat the Portland Trailblazers, 135-121, in other Monday night games.

The 76ers led all the way with the aid of 26 points by Bill Cunningham and 25 by Bob Rule to snap a six-game losing streak with their victory at Buffalo. Randy Smith had 24 points and Elmore Smith 22 for the Braves.

Lou Hudson scored 31 points and Walt Bellamy had 27 to lead the Hawks to their fifth win in their last seven games. Geoff Petrie led Portland with 23.

Jabbar Hits 33.3

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Los Angeles Lakers are winning, winning, winning . . . breaking records, records, records.

The Milwaukee Bucks, at least, proved they are human when they dropped two games last week, a 104-98 decision to Boston and a 120-118 overtime squeaker to Detroit.

But Los Angeles doesn't give anyone a break. Coach Bill Sharman's wrecking crew has a 28-game winning streak and an overall record of 34-3.

Wilt Chamberlain, the man who starts the Lakers running, is leading the National Basketball Association in clearing the boards with an average of 20.4 rebounds per game. Jerry West, the man who keeps the Lakers running, is leading the league in assists with an average of 9.5 per game. And Gail Goodrich, the man who starts the opposition running, is third in the NBA in scoring with a 26.7 points per game average.

Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar still leads the league in scoring with a 33.3 average while shooting field goals at a .582 clip, second best to Chamberlain's .638. Abdul-Jabbar also is second to Chamberlain in rebounds with a 17.7 average.

Scoring:

Player	fg	ft	pts	avg
Jabbar, Milwaukee	488	224	1200	33.3
Love, Chicago	378	193	949	27.1
Goodrich, Los Angeles	384	219	987	26.7
Havlicek, Boston	374	188	936	26.0
Walker, Detroit	344	234	922	25.6
Lanier, Detroit	354	179	887	25.3
West, Los Angeles	297	215	809	25.3

Jack Ferraro in Gear At Mighty M Wednesday

Ferraro Ready For TV Debut

MONTICELLO

Jack Ferraro makes his Monticello Raceway and television debuts all in one package Wednesday night. The Kingston harness driver will pilot his Steep Hill in the Superfecta Race (9th race), a $1500 Class B-3 Pace, Monticello Racing Secretary Ralph Swalsky announced.

The ninth race nightly is the Superfecta Race carried live on Channel 9 at 11 p.m. by the Off-Track Betting Corp. of New York City.

Ferraro made his major track debut in the closing days of the recently concluded Yonkers Raceway meet. Prior to that he had completed his greatest season to date at Saratoga Raceway. There he ranked sixth among all drivers.

At Yonkers, Ferraro started three times with his top pacer—Gerhard Hanover—scoring a first and two seconds. With Lancer Hill he had a second and fifth. Steep Hill, who goes Wednesday night at the Mighty M, finished out of the money in his one start at Yonkers.

Indoor Play For Kickers

MORGAN HILL

Kingston Sport Club Kickers will be among 40 teams participating in the 10th Annual German-American Indoor Soccer Tournament at the Westchester County Center in White Plains, Jan. 15, 16 and 23.

The tournament is open to all first teams of the Major League, Premier Division and League Division. Forty teams are expected to participate. Under indoor rules, each team will play with six men. The first three rounds will be eliminations, with finals scheduled in the fourth round.

The 14 teams of the League Division will participate in the first round. Winners of the first round (seven teams) and the 12 clubs of the Premier Division will go at it in the second round. The third round will feature the 10 winners of the second round and the 10 teams of the Major Division.

Four teams of the Major Division will receive a bye. They are BW Gottschee, Eintracht, Blue Star and German-Hungarians.

"We will have several indoor workouts prior to the tournament," said Player-Manager Henry Ingber of the Kickers. "We won't pick our lineup until the last minute."

Only one team has been able to win the Indoor Championship three times and twice in a row so far. The German-Hungarians managed to win first prize in 1967, 1970 and 1971. The only team to win the Indoor Championship twice is New York Hota in 1966 and 1968.

In other years, the championship has been won by the following teams: New York Hungaria (1963), Blau Weiss Gottschee (1964), Greek-Americans (1965) and Ridge Inter Giuliana (1969).

"The tournament provides fast and exciting action," said Ingber. "Past results prove that any team in the field can win it." More than 8,000 spectators saw last year's tournament.

After the indoor tournament, the Kickers will be marking time until the resumption of the 1971-72 schedule in the Premier Division. They will be fighting to stave off demotion to the League Division, a circuit they graduated from many years ago.

St. Joe's In Finals

POUGHKEEPSIE

St. Mary's Tyro's of Kingston won their fifth straight by upending previously unbeaten St. Mary's of Fishkill, 32-20, on Sunday.

The victory puts St. Mary's in the finals of the St. Mary's of Wappingers Falls Holiday Invitational Tournament. They will meet either St. Mary's of Wappingers Falls or St. Johns of Mathopal for the championship of the Tyro Division, Sunday January 2 in the Lourdes gym.

Scipio Bolea and Tom Caruso paced the winners with 10 and 9 points respectively. St. Mary's of Kingston outscored their Fishkill opponents 17-6 in the first half and only allowed them one point in the first period.

Going into the game, St. Mary's of Fishkill had a 9-0 record and was leading the Tyro League of Dutchess County. In other tournament games, St. Mary's of Fishkill defeated St. Mary's of Kingston, 23-18, in the Small Fry Division, while St. Columbia of Hopewell Junction knocked off St. Mary's of Kingston, 33-25, in the JV game.

The scoring:

St. Mary's Kingston (32) — Bolea 10, Caruso 9, Van Dyke 7, Kahlstruff 4, McGrane 2.

St. Mary's Fishkill (20)—Angelucci 6, Antalek 6, Yellen 5, Brownell 3.

Your Horoscope

Wednesday, December 29

General tendencies: Much nervousness, restlessness and quick wit are in the works today and tonight along with events calling for activity. Since the past two days have been more deliberate ones, it is necessary that you do make a special point to channel your time wisely so you won't be dashing hither and yon without really accomplishing very much.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have many duties of all sorts ahead of you, but you need to whip up enthusiasm early for them. Then all goes beautifully. That data can now be secured that was difficult to get before. Keep Busy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day to make those radical changes now that can help increase your income appreciably. Conversing with a banker can bring forth the information you want. Get advice from big businessman.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You had better plan your time wisely today or you could certainly scatter your forces and accomplish very little. Invite some lonely friend to your home, the theater, etc. Spend a happy time together.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Sit down and plan how to make the new year far more successful and happy by right planning now. Outline your idea to higher-ups if you want the backing they can give. Express yourself well.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you take higher-ups into your confidence as to your ambitions, you will get the support that you need. Accept that invitation but do not make unwise remarks to some new contact. Keep your own counsel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take care you do not critize others and particularly do not irk higher-ups in any way, or you get into much trouble. Find new gadgets to make your work easier, more efficient. Relax tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can do much better today if you are in a cooperative instead of an argumentative mood with others. Don't work some cute angle to gain a wish that others would not appreciate. Treat mate more kindly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Spend some time coming to a better arrangement with co-workers and put aside personal desires now. Try not to labor so hard that you do not have energy left for other important matters also. Balance your life better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't critize an associate or come out with such a radical idea you get laughed at, but keep your feet on the ground. Instead of being blunt, be courteous and all goes well for you. Enjoy music in p.m.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you waste time, you will lose out by not going through with all those tasks awaiting your attention. Show that you have excellent talents. Kindness to mate pays off in big dividends. More happiness is yours too.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 to Feb. 19) If you go out with persons whose ideas of recreation are similar to your own, you find this can be a most enjoyable day, p.m. You have to show real affection for mate if you are to gain the benefits you want. Think logically.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have to give more attention at home if you want to keep or have more harmony in that important realm of your existence. Work toward special aims. Get rid of whatever it is that makes for friction at home.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . . he or she will be one of those charming young people who early in life wants to jump from one thing to another. Be sure to teach to have a goal and work toward it so the energies will not be scattered. Then the chart becomes a successful one, since there is really a brilliant mind here which only needs controlling. There is fine ability at whatever is of a sports nature, in fact, sports could become the life's profession.

"The Stars impel they do not compel" What you maek of your life is largely up to YOU!

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

ONE TIME: (Q.) I went out with my friends one night. They were all drinking. They asked me if I wanted a drink and I said no. They gave me a look as if I was some kind of a queer. So I said yes.

That was the first time I ever drank. My parents found out, and I promised them I would never do it again. But they don't seem to trust me as much as they used to.--Sorry in Connecticut.

(A.) You do not ask a question, but you naturally want to be fully trusted again. Many who write me are in the same predicament, for one cause or another.

One of the most wonderful things a parent can do is to forgive and return to complete trust in a child who has made a mistake and learned from it what is right.

This forgiving and returning is, if possible, more wonderful for the parent than it is for the child. I believe that if you will talk to your parents you can convince them that you have learned a very worth-while lesson.

Then maybe they can share with you the wonderful experience of complete trust. It may take them a while and they may not be able to put it into words, but you will be able to see it in their eyes and their actions jus tas you now see the lack of it.

HAIR HANGE: (Q.) Last summer I lightened my hair. Now the roots are dark again and I want all of it to be its natural color again. But it hangs 'way down and the light part will take a long time to grow out. Could I do anything to make it grow faster?—Two Tints in Oregon.

(A.) Not really. But you can use temporary color in your own original shade until nature can do the repair job.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Gerrymandering is a legislative rearrangement of voting districts so that they favor the political party in power by creating new areas of support. The World Almanac notes that the term was coined after Massachusetts' Gov. Elbridge Gerry redistricted a county so that its shape resembled a salamander.

Good Start for Sonny and Cher

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Sonny and Cher Show" got off to a fast start Monday night. It will take a few more weekly editions before CBS knows whether the variety hour will work as a winter replacement as well as it did as a summer replacement, but it should. The stars have distinctive personality and the hour had style and a good pace.

The husband-and-wife team worked comfortably and seemingly effortlessly in musical numbers. In their comedy dialogues, Sonny continued to play straight man to Cher, mistress of dead-pan put downs, many of which were wryly funny.

Highlight of the program was a witty operatic spoof of "All in the Family," with baritone Robert Merrill doing a passable imitation of Archie Bunker and with Cher playing Edith, his wife. Carroll O'Connor, star of the real TV series, joined the group for a hallelujah chorus to being "numero uno in the ratings."

Harvey Korman was pretty much wasted in some lesser comedy sketches and Cher was not at peak form doing imitations of Marlene Dietrich, Sadie Thompson and Nefertiti.

The program had a particularly imaginative musical number, a fable about peace. It was sung by Cher while some engaging animated cartoons illustrated the words.

NBC programmers continue to experiment with off-beat ways of putting shows together.

Coming along soon will be a novel double feature—two new "World Premiere" programs in succession. Another item on its docket is a two-hour "World Premiere" containing three different segments. Each segment will be a pilot program for a future series.

Some old friends are getting a new lease on life as the hunt for entertainment material intensifies. One of the three-segment pilots will be a revival of "Topper," which years ago was a TV series starring Anne Jeffries and Robert Sterling. Another will be "The Bear and I," spun off the cookie-loving bear on the old Andy Williams hours.

Closer at hand is ABC's "Movie of the Week" on Jan. 4—"Gidget Gets Married," this time with Monie Ellis in the title role.

NBC is thinking about reviving "Lights Out" as a series next season. It was a dramatic series on the network more than 20 years ago.

Then there is the Gay 90s musical show with Fred and Mickie Finn that was an NBC summer replacement several seasons ago and is back as a successful syndicated show called "Happy Days Are Here Again." And game show packagers Goodson and Todman are talking to Bill Cullen about bringing back "The Price Is Right" in syndication. It lasted nine years as a network series.

As the year draws to a close it seems appropriate to disuss one of our booboos. Todays hand appeared in September as an example of getting to seven in spite of interference. The seven heart contract is a good one but it falls one trick short because East holds five diamonds to the 10.

How can a losing bid be a good one? Not from the result but rather from the fact that South belongs in seven hearts and will make that contract more than three-quarters of the time. Remember you don't make all your contracts unless you underbid scandalously.

When we first wrote up this hand the 10 of diamonds was in the North hand. Somewhere along the way it hopped over to East with disastrous results as pointed out by hundreds of readers.

Now for a little fun. Leave that 10 of diamonds over in the East hand. Shift the eight and six of spades between North and South and the hand makes in spite of the diamond situation. Not that it would be likely to make at the table, but if South ruffs his deuce of clubs, draws trumps and leads the queen of spades he has developed what might be called a super-Vienna coup.

West can't afford to duck so he covers. This sets up two of East's spades as high, but when South takes his last two trumps poor East must either unguard his 10 of diamonds or set up South's eight of spades as a winner.

Laird Answers Bombing Critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attacks by congressional Democrats are mounting against stepped up bombing raids over North Vietnam while Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird says the new strikes were prompted by violations of a 1968 understanding with Hanoi.

Laird refused at a year-end news conference Monday to rule out more strikes against North Vietnam and Radio Hanoi reported that fresh waves of American bombers hit various targets for the third straight day today.

The defense chief described the attacks by a reported force of 350 planes as being of limited duration. He said they will not slow down the U.S. troop-withdrawal rate.

With the U.S. troop level in Vietnam down to 160,000, Laird said the "shocking escalation is on protecting the remaining American forces that are in Vietnam today."

But Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. George McGovern said the "shocking escalation . . . sinks us deeper into the quagmire of Indochina and, more important, makes it certain none of our prisoners will be released."

"While Bob Hope acts as an emissary of President Nixon in seeking release of our prisoners, the Air Force acts as the true Nixon instrument in guaranteeing that the number of POWs will be increased," the South Dakota senator said in a statement issued from his presidential campaign headquarters.

Laird said the bombing was spurred by five violations of the 1968 understanding with the North Vietnamese that led to a halt of heavy U.S. air raids over North Vietnam. The bombing halt was ordered by former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Laird cited the recent shelling of South Vietnamese cities including Saigon; violations of the demilitarized zone; a lack of progress in the Paris peace negotiations; attacks on U.S. reconnaissance planes over North Vietnam and Laos; and more attacks on all types of U.S. planes this month than he said had occurred in any one month since 1968.

North Vietnam has never acknowledged the existence of the 1968 agreement.

Laird refused to name targets or elaborate on the bombing. Instead, he said "erroneous statements" by Hanoi in the last 36 hours show the enemy is "obviously confused." He did say all targets hit were military and promised to give complete information after the bombing stops. His silence was motivated by a desire to protect U.S. pilots on the bombing operations, he said.

Nixon, Brandt Begin Talks

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) —President Nixon and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt meet today in a summit session to coordinate their policies aimed at bolstering the Western alliance and reducing tensions with the East.

Nixon arranged a small ceremonial welcome with a cordon of troops and flags flying at his balmy bayside villa. Brandt arrives by helicopter at 1:15 p.m. from Longboat Key, a plus, Florida vacation spot where he spent the night.

Afterwards Nixon and Brandt, winner of the 1971 Nobel Peace Prize, will retreat to a paneled study at 516 Bay Lane, one of the President's resort homes for private talks.

It was one of a series of meetings the President has been holding with major allies to seek their views and to assure them no deals will be made to compromise Free World unity when he makes his journeys to Peking and Moscow next year.

Will Reassure Germany

The President also will try to reassure Germany that the United States will make no troop reductions in Europe without compensatory cuts by Warsaw Pact nations.

"It is particularly timely for the President to sit down with our major allies to talk about, and harmonize, the policies of the allies to the greatest extent possible so that there can be essential unity that will allow each" to proceed with independent policies "within a common framework," said presidential spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler.

"Nixon and Brandt were scheduled to hold 5½ hours of intensive talks today and Wednesday at the beachside compound set off by towering green hibiscus bushes and palm trees.

Nixon also will host an informal "working dinner at his beachside villa for the chancellor and his official party.

Reporters Warned

Reporters were warned in advance not to expect any "dramatic announcements" or specific agreements to emerge from the freewheeling discussions.

On his arrival in Florida Monday, Brandt said he looked forward to a meeting which would "bring the friendship of our countries closer."

Monday evening, Nixon hosted a small dinner for FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who is vacationing here, and Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

He was expected to remain in Florida until New Year's Day, when he flies back to Washington to say goodbye to his wife Pat, who will be leaving on a trip to Africa.

Sadat Calls Joint Session

By United Press International

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat called a special joint session of parliament and the nation's political leadership today to outline his plans for action against Israel.

Today's meeting came less than 24 hours after Sadat's foreign minister, Mahmoud Riad, said war with Israel is "inevitable" and "there can be no alternative to a military settlement" of the Middle East conflict. Riad was speaking to Arab League foreign ministers meeting in Cairo Monday.

Sadat summoned a combined meeting of the 360-member people's council and the 230-member central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party. It was the first such joint session.

Although Sadat often has said that 1971 would be the year of decision whether Middle East problems would be solved by peace or war, there were indications he may allow more time for a political settlement, including the peacemaking mission of U.N. mediator Gunnar V. Jarring.

According to the semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, Sadat was briefing today's meeting on the "possible future developments along the political and military fronts and Egypt's moves during the next weeks."

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Monday Israel was optimistic there could be a negotiated peace settlement in 1972.

He told a news conference in Jerusalem, "I can only express hope that 1972 will be what 1971 was not, a year of negotiation. This is the keynote of the Israeli government policy."

India to Use Civilians To Deal for Safety of Shiek

DACCA (AP) — India will use Pakistani civilians held prisoner in Bangla Desh as bargaining pawns to deal for the safety of Sheik Mujibur Rahman and other Bengalis in West Pakistan, a high Indian official said today.

India's special envoy to Bangla Desh, D. P. Dhar, said the plans to seek a swap is still being worked out and has not yet been offered to the Pakistani government of President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

New Delhi gave the Bangla Desh government the green light Monday to hold war crimes trials for Pakistani soldiers and provincial officials charged with slaughtering Bengalis since March. Foreign Secretary T. N. Kaul told Indian newsmen at a special briefing in the Indian capital that the Geneva Convention on prisoners of war would not stand in the way.

An estimated 97,000 Pakistani soldiers surrendered or were captured in East Pakistan during the two-week war in which India freed the rebel province and set up the Bangla Desh regime.

Some 5,000 civilians also are held by the Indians at a Dacca cantonment. They include former Gov. A. M. Malik and other officials.

Dhar told newsmen that India is concerned for the safety of half a million Bengalis in West Pakistan. They include two Bengali battalions, a large number of dependents and Sheik Mujib, the acknowledged political leader of Bangla Desh.

"There will have to be a package deal," he said. "If Mujib is returned, normalcy will come within two hours."

In West Pakistan, President Bhutto conferred Monday with Sheik Mujib for the first time but reported no progress toward reconciliation.

"All I have to say is that he did not kick me in the teeth, nor did I find it necessary to pull a gun," Bhutto said. "We sat and we talked. And we will continue to talk."

The sheik was arrested last March when the Pakistani army was ordered to crush the Bengali independence movement. After Bhutto replaced Gen. Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan as president, he transferred the sheik to house arrest.

Bhutto referred to Sheik Mujib as an "elected leader of Pakistan who represents the people of East Pakistan." He said his government would consider foreign recognition of Bangla Desh's independence as a "hostile act." So far only India has granted such recognition.

Chou En-lai Opponent Has Been Eliminated

LONDON (UPI) Premier Chou En-lai, with the backing of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, has taken over as China's "political supremo" after smashing opposition to negotiations with President Nixon, diplomatic sources reported from Peking.

They said the only other man in the race to take over China, Defense Minister Lin Piao, has been "physically eliminated."

The Chinese premier, the sources said, appeared to be aiming at rapidly winning for China a leading place in the ranks of the big powers. Though suspicious of the United States, he is ready to negotiate with it, but is increasingly fearful of and hostile to the Soviet Union, they said.

Opposition at home which last summer reportedly aligned Lin Piao and some military leaders, has been silenced for the present. But even the forceful Mao-Chou clampdown is no guarantee it has been eliminated, the report said.

A major purge followed an attempt of the opposition groups to force a halt to Mao's policy shift, the diplomatic sources said.

According to the report, the national assembly had been called for Aug. 16 with the apparent aim of revamping the ruling machinery, including a suspected diminishing of the influence of the armed forces.

Opposition to the policy shift and to internal reform plans took on proportions which led Mao, Chou and their immediate close followers to hit out. In the course of this process Lin Piao and his wife were "physically eliminated," along with some leading military and party leaders, the report said. There was no elaboration.
